President's Letter

Dear Investor,

Enclosed is the annual report for the JNL Series Trust for the year ended December 31, 2023, together with Management's Discussion of Fund Performance for each of the Funds.

Stocks and bonds rallied strongly in the last two months of 2023 to turn what promised to be a dour year into something of a rousing success. It didn't look that way at the start of the year, though, as the U.S. Federal Reserve was rapidly raising short-term interest rates to combat high consumer inflation when soaring longer-term bond yields triggered a "mini"-financial crisis in regional banks with the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank in March. Stocks cratered as investors fled to the safety of short-term government bonds. But by April stocks were off to the races again, especially mega-cap tech stocks fueled by the craze for all things tied to artificial intelligence (AI). Dubbed the "Magnificent Seven", these stocks seemed to will the major stock indices higher through the summer even as other areas stumbled. Meanwhile, bonds again fell out of favor in the face of persistent inflation driven by higher food and energy prices, a downgrade to the U.S. government's credit rating, and political gridlock over the federal budget.

What turned an average but volatile year into an outstanding one for stock investors was the resilience of the U.S. economy, aided by continued low unemployment and U.S. consumers that continued to spend two years after extended Covid lockdowns. As supply-chains became unstuck and inflation gradually eased, the Fed paused the hiking cycle in July, before making their last hike in September. By November, earlier worries about runaway inflation, a potential economic recession, and the possibility of the Fed breaking something with their rate hikes had faded, sparking a rally in both stocks and bonds into year-end. In December, that rally was further fueled by Fed projections of potential rate cuts in 2024.

Looking ahead to 2024, the outlook for the economy and markets is more sanguine. Yet, just as expectations for a recession and a tough year for investors didn't pan out in 2023, one shouldn't rely on forecasts and projections when planning for the long run needs of retirement. The unpredictability and uncertainty of markets and results are what many of Jackson's products are designed to contend with. The JNL Funds platform offers a wide array of investment choices to aid shareholders in sticking to a long-term strategy for achieving their investment goals. The era of reflexively easy Fed monetary policy and ever-rising market returns appears less certain, while the balanced approach of diversification across asset classes and styles provides discipline amid potentially vastly different market environments.

Thank you for choosing Jackson and the JNL Funds for your investment needs.

Domestic Equity: Stocks delivered a banner year despite fears of runaway consumer inflation and a potential recession throughout 2023. Those fears never materialized as unemployment and most economic metrics other than inflation proved resilient in the face of rising interest rates driven by the U.S. Federal Reserve raising its short-term federal funds rates to 5.50% after spending most of the last decade near zero. The S&P 500 Index weathered that rapid change, the Silicon Valley Bank collapse, a downgrade in the U.S. government credit rating, and political gridlock to finish the year up more than 26%.

From day one, gains were driven by large-growth stocks in general, and mega-cap tech stocks in particular. The Nasdaq Composite Index, a proxy for that area of the market, gained more than 43% in 2023. Amid good news and bad, the potential promise of artificial intelligence (AI) demand and productivity enhancements was the tide that mainly lifted large-cap oriented broad-based indices, including the S&P 500. Other areas of the market delivered double-digit gains, but not close to that of the Nasdaq, or even the S&P 500. Information Technology led all S&P 500 sectors with a 57.84% gain for the year, followed by returns from Communication Services (+55.80%), which contains Meta and Alphabet (Google), and Consumer Discretionary (+42.41%; Amazon.com). To get a picture of the dispersion of performance during the year, the Utilities and Energy sectors posted negative returns in 2023.

Fixed Income: Fixed income delivered solid total returns in the end, but only after tracing an extremely volatile path during 2023. The yield on the 10-year US Treasury began the year at 3.80%, dipped down to 3.40% in February before climbing above 4% to begin March. By April it was back down to 3.29% before starting a rocky climb to almost 5% in mid-October. The Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index was down roughly 5% at that point (yields have an inverse relationship with bond prices—as prices decrease yields rise) before staging a monster rally—on milder inflation and the end of the Fed rate hiking cycle—that took the 10-year yield back down to below 4% by year end. The daily volatility in bond prices seen the last two years has been highly unusual historically, highlighting the conflicting economic signals that have arisen as a result of the Covid lockdowns and the end of the near-zero interest-rate policy by the Fed.

Developed International Equity: Foreign developed markets delivered solid double-digit gains in 2023, but lagged most broad-based U.S. indices. Many thought that foreign stocks would be able to build on its relative outperformance against the U.S. in 2022 on attractive valuations, less worrisome overall inflation data, and a milder rate-hiking cycle. Instead, lackluster productivity and recessions, or near recessions, in key markets such as Germany and the UK, led to relatively weaker returns. Economic weakness in global end markets, especially China, served as a headwind for manufacturing in developed Europe as well. The global dominance of U.S. technology firms and value-oriented, less tech focused composition of foreign developed markets also played a role in underperformance for the year.

Emerging Markets: Foreign emerging markets sharply lagged both the U.S. and developed international markets. Economic trends in China, which comprises roughly a quarter of the emerging markets equity index, seemed to get only weaker in 2023 after struggling in 2022. Potential de-globalization and signs of capital flight on perceived risks from internal government crackdowns and external geopolitical turmoil hasn't helped. Other emerging countries suffered from declining commodity prices, especially after oil prices peaked early in the year. Despite annual predictions of its pending demise, the U.S. dollar didn't finish far off from where it started after bouncing around for much of the year, thus failing to provide much of a tailwind to foreign returns. One of the few bright spots for emerging markets was India, which benefitted from investors frustrated with China, as its stock market soared more than 20%.

Alternatives: As represented by the Wilshire Liquid Alternative Index, alternative investment strategies lagged both stocks and bonds in 2023. The lack of meaningful trends other than the dominance of mega-cap tech stocks was a headwind for most hedge equity and long-short strategies. It was an off year for merger and acquisition activity, though merger arbitrage strategies would have had difficulty keeping up with the stock gains of 2023 in any year. Negative returns from commodities not only hurt alternative assets but also put a crimp in many Global Macro strategies. All told, it was difficult for a basket of diverse strategies to keep pace when performance is mostly concentrated in just a small sliver of the equity market.

Each Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by investing in shares of a diversified group of affiliated Funds (“Underlying Funds”). The Schedule of Investments and Financial Statements for the Underlying Funds are available at jackson.com or on the SEC’s website at www.sec.gov.

Changes to the JNL Allocation Funds were made in February, July, November, and December. Overall asset class changes throughout the year reduced the Funds’ alternative weight while bringing fixed income and equity exposure more in line with the benchmark. The JNL Allocation Funds trimmed exposure to the JNL/Neuberger Commodity Strategy and JNL Multi-Manager Alternative Funds throughout 2023. Weightings were reduced in multiple credit focused holdings within the fixed income portions of the Funds. Specifically, positions in the JNL/T. Rowe Price U.S. High Yield Fund, JNL/PIMCO Investment Grade Credit Fund, and JNL/PIMCO Income Fund were trimmed. Positions in U.S. value and international equity were increased during the July trades, including JNL/JP Morgan US Value Fund and JNL/Causeway International Value Fund.

A new position in the Jackson Credit Opportunities Fund was initiated in November. The Fund seeks to outperform the liquid high-yield bond market over time with less volatility and lower correlation to traditional market indexes and other investments in the JNL Allocation Funds. The December trade continued to add to traditional equity exposure in the Growth and Aggressive Growth Funds including increasing positions in the JNL/Morningstar Wide Moat Index Fund, JNL/Harris Oakmark Global Equity Fund, and JNL Multi-Manager International Small Cap Fund.

Each Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by investing in shares of a diversified group of affiliated Underlying Funds (“Underlying Funds”). The Schedules of Investments and Financial Statements for the Underlying Funds are available on the SEC’s website at www.sec.gov.

The only changes to occur in the Funds took place in February and were undertaken to align the Funds with the team’s capital market assumptions. The Funds’ allocations to fixed income and equities were brought closer to neutral levels while adjustments within each sleeve provided further diversification.

Positions in the American Funds New World and American Funds International Growth and Income Funds were slightly increased to add to the Funds’ international exposure and decrease overall exposure to U.S. Equities.

A new position in American Funds American Mutual was initiated as the team leaned more into value versus other holdings with more natural growth biases. In the fixed income sleeve, American Funds Mortgage Fund was also added back to the Fund while American Funds Short-Term Bond Fund of America was removed as certain active risks were trimmed including an underweight to interest rate risk and the mortgage-backed security sector relative to benchmarks.

During 2023, Goldman Sachs Asset Management, L.P. implemented the following asset allocation and fund selection changes in the Fund.

In March, the Fund trimmed out of benchmark commodity exposure in favor of international large cap value equities given the more favorable outlook on the eurozone economy versus commodity demand. Additionally, within fixed income the Fund reduced allocations in short-term income focused and short-term core fixed income funds to enhance allocations to intermediate-term and core plus fixed income funds. While duration was increased, it remained below benchmark neutral levels considering the non-linear pace of deflation.

In August, consistent with the allocation in March, the Fund further trimmed commodity exposure in favor of international large cap value equities. As inflationary pressure continued to trend down, the Fund reduced our exposure to commodities in favor of core equities exposures.

Total fixed income allocations were moderately increased and more material shifts were made to underlying sub advised funds across the managed funds to extend duration. The Fund unwound allocations to short term managers and reduced a part of our high yield and cash allocation to fund longer duration, core fixed income managers. In the wake of the recent banking crisis, we recognized the potential for U.S. banks to further tighten lending standards.

JNL iShares Tactical Moderate Fund, JNL iShares Tactical Moderate Growth Fund and JNL iShares Tactical Growth Fund (collectively "JNL iShares Tactical Funds") seek to achieve their investment objectives by investing in a diversified group of underlying exchange traded funds ("ETFs"). Each JNL iShares Tactical Fund's asset allocation is determined by the Funds' Adviser through a proprietary asset allocation model. The Funds' Sub Adviser, Mellon Capital Management Corporation, executes transactions in the underlying ETFs to closely replicate the allocation determined by the Adviser.

All three Funds underperformed their benchmarks due mainly due to the results international equity positions. Holdings in iShares Global Healthcare ETF (+3.64%) and iShares Core MSCI Emerging Markets ETF (+11.57%) were the largest relative detractors during the year.

Changes to the Funds occurred in both March and July during 2023. The Funds traded the JNL iShares Tactical ETF Portfolios twice in March aiming to modify certain underlying risk exposures in equity and fixed income. While the total allocation to equities went unchanged, cash levels were reduced to fund a small increase to overall fixed income allocations. The iShares Cohen & Steers REIT ETF in the JNL iShares Tactical Moderate ETF Fund was removed and trimmed in the other funds. The Funds also entered in positions in the iShares MSCI USA Quality Factor and iShares 20+ Year Treasury Bond ETFs.

The Funds' reduction in cash and removal of dedicated commodities exposure funded an increase to equity and fixed income. The VanEck Morningstar Wide Moat ETF was added. The position in the iShares MBS ETF was trimmed, and the Funds increased the weighting in the iShares 5 to 10 Year Investment Grade Corporate Bond ETF.

Changes to the JNL/Vanguard ETF Allocation Funds were undertaken to align the Funds with the team's capital market assumptions. Changes at the asset class level were minimal but there were several adjustments to the underlying mix of holdings within each sleeve.

The overall exposure to equity was reduced slightly to be neutral weight relative to the benchmark. The primary change was a modest move further into non-U.S. equities funded by a downward shift in U.S. large cap stocks. The Vanguard FTSE Developed Markets ETF was added while the positions in Vanguard Total Stock Market, Vanguard Growth, and Vanguard Value ETFs were trimmed.

Within fixed income, the Funds added to duration to a level more in line with benchmark while lessening several sector bets. New positions in the Vanguard Long-Term Treasury and Vanguard Intermediate-Term Treasury ETFs were initiated while Vanguard Intermediate-Term Corporate Bond and Vanguard Ultra-Short Bond ETFs were trimmed. Overall, fixed income attributes were adjusted to be more in line with the benchmark.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Bond Index Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 5.49% for Class I shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

The investment objective is to match the performance of the Bloomberg® US Aggregate Bond Index. The Fund is constructed utilizing a combination of stratified sampling, characteristics matching, and replication to match the key performance driving characteristics of the benchmark.

Developed fixed income markets were positive for the year. Investors focused on moderating global inflation, a resilient U.S. economy and increasing signs in the back half of the year that large central banks were approaching the end of rate hikes. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note was 3.88% as of December 29, 2023.

For 2023, the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index returned 5.53%. The Bloomberg® Global Aggregate Hedged Index returned 7.15% and the Bloomberg® Global Aggregate Unhedged Index returned 5.72% during the year. The yield on the 2-year Treasury note was 4.25% as of December 29, 2023. The U.S. Federal Reserve (“Fed”) entered the year with a relatively hawkish tone, raising interest rates four times between February and July. After holding interest rates steady for several meetings, the Fed took a decidedly dovish pivot in December, guiding towards multiple rate cuts in 2024 and a “soft landing” scenario for the economy.

Shares of Banco do Brasil SA rose as the company has been increasing net interest income. E-commerce platform StoneCo Ltd. rose on future growth trajectory plans. Indian automotive stocks Mahindra & Mahindra Limited and Bajaj Auto Limited rose as the long term fundamentals of the Indian market are promising as consumers increasingly buy motor vehicles. In IT, outperformance was led by semiconductor and semi equipment positions which benefitted from the Artificial Intelligence ("AI") mania. Offsetting detractors came from consumer staples, where Proya Cosmetics Co., Ltd. and Tech-Bank Food Co., Ltd. declined.

The short strategy rose in price more than the Index, thus detracting from relative performance. Shorted semiconductor related stocks were among the biggest detractors. During COVID-19, there was a big shortage of semi stocks, which led to record price hikes for semi chips. Over the past year, supply of semi chips has steadily increased. We believe that semiconductor valuations have peaked and have recently seen firms guide earnings estimates down. Regardless of this economic backdrop, semiconductor stocks performed well in the year, primarily due to new demand from AI.

At year end, the benchmark net traded at 11.5 times 2024 earnings consensus. The long strategy traded at 11.3 times 2024 earnings consensus. Over time, we expect our long-strategy and short-strategy to converge, as mid cap and small cap stocks with attractive characteristics (value momentum quality) rerate upwards; and stocks with poor characteristics disappoint the high expectations embedded in their share prices. As always, the strategy remains well positioned with attractive valuations, solid fundamentals, and identifiable catalysts.

DoubleLine Capital LP ("DoubleLine")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 15.04%.

The strategy's outperformance was driven by its overweight allocation to structured credit sectors relative to the benchmark, as credit spreads broadly tightened during the year. Despite generating a positive return in 2023, fixed income was overshadowed by a massive equity rally that few saw coming. Many market participants expected a U.S. recession where traditional fixed income would outperform riskier credit. However, the recession did not materialize, and riskier credit rallied as investors shrugged off a regional banking crisis, debt ceiling worries, and geopolitical tensions, albeit not without some short term volatility in markets. Through October, traditional fixed income returns were modestly negative, but strong November and December returns flipped many fixed income sectors positive for the year. The largest contributors

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager Alternative Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 11.24% for Class A shares compared to 4.42% for the Wilshire Liquid Alternative Index.

The JNL Multi-Manager Alternative Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by allocating among a variety of alternative strategies managed by unaffiliated investments managers ("Sub-Advisers"). Each of the Sub-Advisers may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's alternatives investment strategies and for determining the amount of Fund assets to allocate to each Sub-Adviser.

The Fund outperformed due to strength of several of the sleeves in the Fund's equity hedged and relative value strategies. Loomis (+34.03%) was the top performing strategy across the Fund. KAR (+18.24%), DoubleLine (+9.87%), Lazard (+7.92%), and Westchester to performance were non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities and collateralized loan obligations. The strategy holds sizable allocations to subordinated segments of the capital structure in both sectors, and these high carry bonds experienced the most significant spread tightening. Emerging market debt, commercial mortgage-backed securities, and high yield corporates also contributed to performance due to the spread tightening seen during the year, particularly in the last two months of the year. The only sector to detract from performance was asset-backed securities as some riskier bonds in the consumer and aircraft subsectors underperformed.

First Pacific Advisors, LP (“First Pacific”)

For the Fund’s allocation to the contrarian value equity long/short strategy, First Pacific invests in common and preferred stocks, convertible securities and corporate, high-yield and government debt. At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to this strategy was 11.57%.

The top five contributors among the strategy’s holdings, which were long positions in Meta Platforms, Inc., Alphabet Inc., Holcim AG, Broadcom Inc., and Amazon.com, Inc., contributed most of the strategy’s absolute return for the year. Conversely, equity positions in International Flavors & Fragrances Inc., NEXON Co., Ltd., FirstEnergy Corp., and Signature Bank, along with McDermott International, Ltd., comprised the largest detractors for the strategy.

International Flavors & Fragrances Inc. missed financial targets and lowered guidance for 2023, which, along with the delays in the company’s efforts to reduce its debt load, led to a significant decline in its stock price. The Fund added to the strategy’s position during 2023, as we view much of the company’s business as resilient and high quality, while we believe the company’s debt should prove manageable considering its low cost and long duration.

Broadcom Inc. has been a holding for just short of five years. At the time of the original purchase, the company was primarily focused on driving organic growth in its existing semiconductor franchises and acquiring new ones when the opportunity presented itself. As potential acquisition candidates in the industry became scarce, management, led by highly regarded Hock Tan, pivoted to set their sights on the software industry, culminating in several acquisitions. After multiple discussions with senior management, we found ourselves comfortable with the company’s new strategy after reexamining the investment implications. We are glad we did, as we think it would be an understatement to say that Broadcom Inc. has only strengthened over the past five years, improving operating margins, aggressively repurchasing shares, and increasing the dividend, all the while continuing to execute its merger and acquisition strategy flawlessly. 2023 saw a sharp rally in global equities after 2022’s challenging climate, especially for growth focused businesses. With the U.S. Federal Reserve seemingly easing its stance on aggressive monetary tightening, coupled with a strong economy, the market rallied to close slightly higher than where investors started in 2022. Led by strong performance in the tech space on the back of market expectations of potential rate cuts in 2024, the strategy’s long equity portfolio posted favorable absolute returns. As global stocks and distressed debt are beginning to look expensive yet again, we maintain ample liquidity for future opportunities should the market afford us the opportunity to uncover securities with a margin of safety.

Kayne Anderson Rudnick Investment Management, LLC (“KAR”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to this strategy was 10.66%.

The investment objective of the strategy is to leverage the firm’s high quality investment philosophy to create an alternative strategy that has equity like returns with less downside risk.

In the long strategy, poor stock selection and an underweight in information technology and consumer discretionary detracted from performance. Good stock selection in industrials and consumer staples contributed positively to performance.

The biggest contributors to performance were long positions in Primerica, Inc. and Lennox International Inc. Primerica’s continued growth in its sales force and normalizing claims expense following the pandemic have offset above average lapse rates and supported healthy growth and profitability. Lennox International Inc.’s shares outperformed due to solid execution in reinvigorating its commercial HVAC business which saw notable improvements in growth and profitability over the past several quarters, mitigating some of the weakness in residential HVAC. We also believe that improving financial performance has driven investor optimism around the overall business strategy under new leadership. Other top contributors included a long position in Alphabet Inc., Lamb Weston Holdings, Inc., and Old Dominion Freight Line, Inc.

The biggest detractors to performance were a long position in Silk Road Medical, Inc. and a short position in a transportation service company. Silk Road Medical, Inc. reported weak numbers, confirming fears that the business was seeing increased competition from other methods, as well as stubbornly low adoption among trained physicians. The company’s CEO stepped down and the strategy exited the position as the company’s competitive position was not as strong as anticipated. Other bottom contributors included short positions in a tax preparation company, a real estate brokerage, and a manufacturer of commercial duty automatic transmissions and hybrid propulsion systems.

The strategy does not invest in derivatives.

Lazard Asset Management LLC (“Lazard”)

For the Fund’s allocation to the relative value strategy, Lazard invests in convertible securities, preferred securities, equity and debt, with the objective of current income, long-term capital appreciation and principal protection. At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to this strategy was 15.02%.

Positively contributing to returns in 2023 were carry, volatility yield, and special situations. Net carry (coupon, net of dividend and finance cost) averaged approximately 3.3% throughout the year. Volatility yield, the return associated with the dynamic hedging and rehedging of the equity underlying the convertible, was a consistent, positive contributor despite equity volatility remaining muted for much of the year, with the VIX finishing the year in the 13th percentile. Special situations added to returns in each quarter throughout the year, as convertible issuers looked to address their capital structure needs by repurchasing debt and/or extending maturities (i.e. buybacks and exchange offers). Strategy level equity hedges, implemented using ETFs and options on the Nasdaq 100, Russell 2000, and S&P 500, were a small positive contributor for the year.

The leading detractor for the year was the convertible basis cheapening mainly driven by two factors. A reduction in volatility inputs throughout the year and a supply and demand associated with long only selling. Year over year, the team reduced volatility assumptions across the book by approximately 20% as equity volatility contracted throughout much of the year, with the VIX remaining between 12-16 for much of the second half of 2023. Strategy level credit hedges were a small detractor for the year as well, as high yield spreads tightened.

As we look forward to 2024, the absolute value proposition, associated with the sources of return to the strategy (carry, pull to par, and volatility yield), remains attractive with low double digit return potential. Special situations activity is expected to remain elevated as issuers look for non-traditional ways to address their capital structures and attend to the upcoming maturity wall in the next 2 to 3 years. The team expects issuance to remain at or above historical averages, with more cross over issuers seeking the convertible market, given elevated interest rates. Additionally, with equity volatility near historical lows, the team remains well positioned to take advantage of any mean reversion.

Loomis, Sayles & Company, L.P.
(“Loomis”)

For the Fund's allocation to the relative equity long/short strategies, Loomis invests in equity securities of all market capitalization. At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Loomis was 18.20%.

Long positions in Meta Platforms, Inc, Amazon.com, Inc., Tesla Inc., Alphabet Inc., and The Boeing Company were top contributors to performance. The short sleeve overall detracted from performance and partially offset positive absolute performance for the strategy during the year. The sleeve continues to provide the net exposure profile we desire and continues to contribute positively to long-term alpha. During the year, in the long sleeve we added to the existing positions in Adyen N.V., Block, Inc., and Doximity, Inc. The strategy trimmed its existing position in Novartis AG. In the short sleeve we covered three positions.

The strategy's objective is to generate attractive long-term absolute positive returns regardless of market direction by capturing long and short alpha insights in a hedged vehicle to deliver equity like returns with below market beta and volatility. We continue to take a conservative long biased approach that retains cash proceeds from short sales which results in a typical net exposure range of 40-60%. As of December 31, 2023, the strategy's net exposure is 63.3%.

Westchester Capital Management, LLC
(“Westchester”)

For the Fund's allocation to the merger arbitrage and event driven strategy, Westchester employs a merger arbitrage strategy that invests in common stock, preferred stock, corporate debt, derivatives, total return swaps and contracts for differences and, occasionally, warrants of companies which are involved in publicly announced mergers, takeovers, tender offers, leveraged buyouts, spin offs, liquidations and other corporate reorganizations. At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 16.41%.

Looking at the year, 2023 presented a mixed picture of the mergers & acquisitions (“M&A”) landscape, especially considering the challenges faced in the previous year. Given the difficult conditions in 2022, it was no surprise that merger activity began in a subdued manner. Rising rates, increased financing costs (particularly relevant to private equity deals), ongoing geopolitical tensions, and a potential banking crisis in the first quarter contributed to a more cautious approach by company boards toward corporate reorganizations, particularly in the first half of the year.

However, as the year progressed, CEO confidence improved noticeably. This positive shift was aided by greater transparency and predictability in the regulatory environment. Several high profile transactions, including Horizon Pharmaceuticals/Amgen Inc., Activision/Microsoft Corporation, and VMware, Inc./Broadcom Inc., were completed despite initial regulatory pushback, boosting confidence in the market. This positive development paved the way for a solid second half of the year, with M&A volume reaching over $1.7 trillion, out of the total global value of $3.1 trillion for the entirety of 2023.

There are several noteworthy attributes both domestically and internationally. North America continued to be a driving force in merger activity, accounting for a record 58% of global volume in 2023. This rebound was primarily propelled by strategic (as opposed to financially driven) transactions, with deals over $20 billion accounting for a record 28% of the total volume alone, as reported by Dealogic.

The strategy posted a 2.36% gain in the fourth quarter, resulting in a 5.85% return year to date. Merger arbitrage can also be considered as a bond diversification strategy given its historically low correlation to both stocks and bonds, with volatility like that of a short to medium term bond. As a comparison, the U.S. 3-month Treasury Bill returned 5.01% during the 2023 calendar year.

While macro factors influence the strategy, the investment returns are almost exclusively driven by outcomes of corporate events. The top contributors were Special Purpose Acquisition Companies (+1.83%), Activision Blizzard, Inc./Microsoft Corporation (+0.75%), and Seagen Inc./Pfizer Inc. (+0.67%). During this year, the most significant losers were First Horizon Corporation/ The Toronto-Dominion Bank (-2.29%), Silicon Motion, Inc./MaxLinear, Inc. (-0.73%), Euronav/Frontline PLC (-0.28%). The strategy ended the year with 45 positions and was approximately 88% invested.

Looking ahead to 2024, we are optimistic about the continued increase in merger activity. The biggest challenge to M&A is uncertainty, but with more clarity in the regulatory environment and a positive track record of wins in the courtroom, strategic players are expected to ramp up their acquisition activity both here and abroad. Additionally, as the economic outlook stabilizes, the mismatch in price expectations between buyers and sellers will likely narrow, and the $1.8 trillion in cash on corporate balance sheets provides ample buyer power. Moreover, private equity sponsors face pressure to monetize their assets, with a record $1.5 trillion in dry powder in North America alone, and the catalysts for activism will continue to persist. With a more predictable cost of capital and ongoing pressure to look for growth opportunities to keep up with the speed of innovation across all industry groups, we anticipate an increase in corporate activity in 2024, a trend we have already begun to see in the first few weeks of the new year.

Western Asset Management Company,
LLC (“Western Asset”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 0.00%. Effective November 30, 2023, Western was removed as a Sub-Adviser to JNL Multi-Manager Alternative Fund.

Duration and yield-curve positioning was the most significant detractor on a net basis mainly because of overall long U.S. duration. Japanese and UK duration positioning also detracted albeit to a lesser extent, while German duration positioning was beneficial for returns. Emerging markets (“EM”) debt was the most significant contributor to performance during the year, driven mainly by local currency sovereign exposures in Brazil and Poland. Investment grade credit was a contributor, driven by exposure to credit default swaps (“CDX”), energy, financials, and consumer noncyclical. Mortgage and asset-backed securities also had a positive impact, driven by exposure to collateralized loan obligations. Overall foreign exchange (“FX”) positioning was a detractor. The negative contribution from developed markets FX was driven mainly by Japanese Yen and Australian Dollar exposures, while the positive contribution from EM FX was driven mainly by Mexican Peso exposure. High-yield exposure was a modest detractor as the negative impact of Credit Suisse AT1 exposure was partially offset by energy, consumer cyclicals and CDX, which added to returns over the year.

The strategy used several derivative instruments to implement its positioning. Eurodollar, Euribor, SONIA, SOFR and Federal Fund futures, futures on U.S., German, Japanese and UK Treasuries, options on Eurodollar, SOFR, U.S. and

JNL Multi-Manager Alternative Fund

German Treasury futures, as well as U.S., UK, Brazilian and Mexican interest rate swaps and UK inflation swaps, were used to manage duration/curve positioning. Currency forwards, futures and options were utilized to manage currency positioning. Index CDX and single name CDX were used to tactically manage the strategy's sector exposures. Derivatives were a net detractor from performance over the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager Emerging Markets Equity Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 10.11% for Class A shares compared to 11.51% for the Morningstar Emerging Markets Index (Net).

The JNL Multi-Manager Emerging Markets Equity Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by investing, under normal circumstances, at least 80% of its assets in a variety of emerging market equity strategies managed by unaffiliated Sub-Advisers. Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

The Fund underperformed the benchmark during the year due to underperformance from two out of its four underlying strategies. T. Rowe (+12.62%) outperformed based on strong stock selection while KAR's (+24.02%) overweight to Industrials and none holding of energy were additive. WCM (+5.74%) underperformed because of poor stock selections in the year, especially in consumer discretionary and information technology. Wellington (+4.70%) posted the worst returns of the sleeves as poor stock selection in Chinese names such as Meituan and China Tourism Group Duty Free Corporation Limited were a drag on performance.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

Kayne Anderson Rudnick Investment Management, LLC ("KAR")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 24.38%.

The investment objective of the strategy is to achieve a return meaningfully above that of the benchmark and to achieve this return objective with a strategy that exhibits lower overall risk characteristics.

Stock selection was strong in communication services, consumer discretionary, and financials and underweights to consumer discretionary and real estate contributed to relative outperformance. Conversely, stock selection was challenged in consumer staples, industrials, and information technology and an overweight to communication services detracted from relative results. From a geographic perspective, poor stock selection in South Korea and Taiwan and an underweight to India detracted from performance. Good stock selection in Europe ex. U.K. (Lithuania and Poland) and good stock selection and an overweight in Latin America (Brazil and Mexico) contributed positively to performance.

The biggest contributors to performance were Baltic Classifieds Group and Grupa Pracuj Spolka Akcyjna. Baltic Classifieds Group is the leading online classifieds group in the Baltics. The company's share price had declined sharply in early in 2022 following the Russian invasion of Ukraine. Since that time, Baltic Classifieds Group has continued to generate strong growth in revenues and earnings. Over the course of 2023, the company continued to report excellent results and the shares reacted positively. Grupa Pracuj is a leading online job portal in Poland. After underperforming last year, the company has been performing better this year with its business fundamentals showing resilient results despite a weaker macroeconomic backdrop. Other top contributors included Tegma Gestao Logistica S.A., Qualitas Controladora, S.A.B. de C.V., and Oracle Financial Services Software Limited.

The biggest detractors to performance were Saramin Co., Ltd. and NICE Information Service Co., Ltd. Saramin Co., Ltd. is the leading online job portal operating in South Korea. After two years of strong demand, hiring demand in Korea declined in 2023 and results showed year over year declines. This was well anticipated and Saramin Co., Ltd. has been underperforming for about a year now. The competitive position remains strong, and we believe the business will start growing again once the weak hiring cycle turns. Nice Information Service CO., Ltd. is the leading credit bureau business in South Korea. The company's underperformance in 2023 was primarily driven by the weakness in its business. As interest rates rose, credit demand has been subdued and the company's business struggled to show meaningful growth. Other bottom contributors included Carlsberg Brewery Malaysia Berhad, Muti Commodity Exchange of India, and WebCash Co., Ltd.

The strategy does not invest in derivatives.

T. Rowe Price Associates, Inc. ("T. Rowe")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 30.15%.

Stock selection drove both sector and country returns. The stock choices in financials significantly contributed to relative returns (OTP Bank Nyrt) following consensus beating results of banks which benefited from the rate hike cycle while stock selection in materials (Grupo Mexico, S.A.B. de C.V.) added value as the conglomerate with interest in copper mining delivered strong free cash flow and higher dividend in the third quarter. On the other hand, energy hampered returns due to our stock choices (China Oilfield Services Limited).

At the country level, China was a source of strength due to stock selection (Weichai Power Co., Ltd.). Lack of exposure to Meituan helped as the company warned of a slowdown in its core delivery business amid intensifying competition. Conversely, the underweight in Taiwan was the main detractor, offsetting the impact of favorable stock selection. Technology oriented Taiwan outperformed driven by the enthusiasm about artificial intelligence and signs of improving hardware demand.

The five largest purchases during the year were Alibaba Group Holding Limited, Banco Bradesco S.A., Focus Media Information Technology Co., Ltd., SK Hynix Inc., and Saudi Basic Industries Corporation.

The five largest sales during the year were: American Beverage Co Ambev, Kangwon Land, Inc., Inner Mongolia Yili Industrial Group Co., Ltd., Baidu, Inc., and GRUMA S.A.B. de C.V.

As of December 31, 2023, at the sector level, the strategy was overweight the benchmark in real estate, consumer staples, and industrials while it was underweight communication services and information technology. China was the biggest absolute exposure. The country and sector weightings are the residual of the bottom up stock selection process and typically reflect where the strategy manager is finding compelling investment opportunities at the individual company level.

We remain constructive toward emerging markets ("EM"), which we believe will grow faster than their developed market counterparts. Expectations of interest rate cuts will serve as a positive catalyst. Moreover, we believe that capital spending in EM will increase in response to the capacity requirements needed to achieve the decarbonization of industries and address the impact of deglobalization. The rebuilding of supply chains and transition to green energy could benefit companies in financials and industrials. We believe that certain commodities and value focused sectors will gain from the renewable energy transition.

Geopolitical friction is driving changes in global supply chains and may lead to a multiyear investment cycle. Deglobalization is prompting many U.S. and European companies to shift their sourcing strategies as they seek to reduce transport costs and their environmental footprint. Moreover, infrastructure spending is long overdue after years of underinvestment from companies and governments since the 2007 to 2008 global budgetary crisis, when the focus was on repairing balance sheets.

In China, we also believe that the high excess household savings rate will gradually likely benefit travel related, insurance, and electric vehicles related companies, which could become attractive investments as domestic demand improves. Valuations remain undemanding in China when compared to historical levels.

WCM Investment Management, LLC
("WCM")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 28.59%.

Attribution analysis reveals that the majority of the strategy's underperformance can be attributed to stock selection.

From a sector allocation perspective, information technology (overweight) was the largest positive contributor to the relative performance, followed by communication services (underweight) and materials (underweight). On the other hand, energy (no weight) detracted from our relative performance, as did consumer staples (overweight) and health care (overweight).

Looking at stock selection, consumer staples (Fomento Economico Mexicano, S.A.B. de C.V. - ADR, Dino Polska Spolka Acyjna, Wal - Mart de Mexico, S.A.B. de C.V.) was the best performing sector relative to the benchmark, followed by industrials (Grupo Aeroportuario del Sureste, S.A.B. de CV - ADR, Bharat Electronics Limited, Grupo Aeroportuario del Centro Norte S.A.B. de C.V.) and financials (Nu Holdings Ltd., Qualitas Controladora, S.A.B. De C.V., TCS Group Holding PLC - GDR). On the flipside, consumer discretionary (Li Ning Company Limited, Naspers Limited, Coupang, Inc.) was the worst performing sector relative to the benchmark, followed by information technology (Xiamen Faratronic Co., Ltd., Endava PLC - ADR, Silergy Corp.) and materials (UPL Limited, Sunresin New Materials Co., Ltd., PI Industries Limited).

Wellington Management Company, LLP
("Wellington")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to this strategy was 16.18%.

Security selection was the primary driver of relative underperformance. Selection within consumer discretionary, materials and health care drove weak relative results. This was partially offset by selection in communication services.

Top detractors from relative performance during the year included Contemporary Amperex Technology Co., Limited (industrials), China Merchants Bank Co., Ltd. (financials), and Meituan (consumer discretionary). Top relative contributors to performance during the year included the positions in Larsen and Toubro Limited (Industrials), Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company Limited (information technology), and Nanya Technology Corporation (information technology).

The largest purchases during the year included initiating positions in HDFC Bank Limited (information technology), Larsen and Toubro Limited (industrials), and Shinhan Financial Group Co., Ltd. (financials). The largest sales during the year included eliminating the positions in Hon Hai Precision Industry Co., Ltd. (information technology) and China Resources Beer (Holdings) Company Limited (consumer staples) and a trim to the exposure in Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company Limited (information technology).

At the end of the year the strategy was most overweight Brazil, China, Hong Kong, and Thailand. The largest underweights were to Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates, and Malaysia. As a reminder, country weights are not explicitly targeted and are a fallout of bottom-up stock selection.

Derivatives were not utilized during the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager International Small Cap Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 22.47% for Class A shares compared to 15.16% for the Morningstar Global ex-US Small Cap Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

The JNL Multi-Manager International Small Cap Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by allocation to international small capitalization strategies managed by unaffiliated Sub-Advisers. Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

All four sleeves in the Fund outperformed the benchmark during the year. Causeway's strong selection of securities including Wistron Corporation, KPIT Technologies Ltd., and Gigabyte Technologies Co., Ltd in information technology propelled it to being the top performing sleeve during the year (+28.29%). Selection in financials, communications services, and energy were areas of strength for WCM (+23.32%), Baillie Gifford (+17.84%) outperformed during the year mainly as a result of overweighting information technology stocks.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

Baillie Gifford & Co. ("Baillie Gifford")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Baillie Gifford was 27.59%.

What encouraged us as we entered 2023 was that throughout the darkest hours of 2022, most of the Fund's holdings, even those that had seen their share prices suffer, continued to perform well operationally. We are reassured to see the operational resilience we saw in 2022 feed through into a positive relative return for 2023.

We remain enthused by the signs of recovery and expect that as macro pressures ease the operational strength of the strategy's holdings should increasingly translate to strong share price returns. One trend we have mixed feelings about is acquisitions of the holdings, of which three were announced during the year. These deals have sensible rationale and importantly come with significant share price premia; nevertheless, we would prefer to keep hold of companies for the long term in general.

The investment objective of the strategy is long term capital appreciation. The strategy seeks to meet this objective by investing in international smaller companies with excellent and underappreciated long term growth potential. It invests with a long term investment horizon and the ability to look through short term volatility. This presents an opportunity to capture these immature companies' significant upside potential about profit growth and, ultimately, share price appreciation.

The strategy does not use derivatives.

Small cap remains an out of favor asset class and there remains a strong preference for certainty in markets. Over the long term we believe it is the willingness to embrace appropriate risk for potentially asymmetric returns that defines successful small cap investing. We remain convinced that the strategy contains some of the very best small businesses operating in international markets today, businesses that offer remarkable upsides for patient investors.

Furthermore, we are extremely excited by the opportunities on offer in equity markets going into 2024. The upside to small cap share price recovery lagging larger peers, as it has done recently, is that it leaves the door open for us to find compelling, mispriced investment opportunities. We remain optimistic that these will continue to drive long term performance for years to come.

Causeway Capital Management LLC ("Causeway")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Causeway was 44.63%.

The strategy's strong return of 28.29% gross of fees was generated by holdings in information technology, financials, and industrials. The strategy's holdings in communication services and energy, as well as an overweight position in energy, offset a portion of the performance. The top contributor was technology products company, Wistron Corporation. Additional top contributors included electrical power financier, Power Finance Corporation Limited, and import and export resource company, Posco International Corporation. The top detractor was online consumer finance platform, FinVolution Group - ADR. Other top detractors included coal mine operator, Whitehaven Coal Limited, and metal concentrates producer, Aurubis AG.

To evaluate stocks in our investable universe, our multi-factor quantitative model employs four bottom-up factor categories – valuation, earnings growth, technical indicators, and competitive strength – and two top-down factor categories assessing macroeconomic and country aggregate characteristics. Valuation, earnings growth, and competitive strength factors delivered positive returns in 2023, and technical indicators slightly underperformed. Our macroeconomic factor category delivered positive returns in 2023 and the country aggregate factor category delivered a negative return in the year.

Though we analyze many different stock selection factors in our alpha model, value factors receive the largest weight on average. Even if the U.S. Federal Reserve is finished hiking policy rates, interest rates are likely to remain elevated for some time, and a higher cost of capital should translate into a continued preference for value stocks. As of the end of December, the MSCI ACWI ex USA Small Cap Growth Index traded at a 16.9x forward price to earnings multiple compared to 10.1x for the MSCI ACWI ex USA Small Cap Value Index, a 68% premium. We believe another attractive feature of international small caps is that they exhibit greater valuation dispersion than large caps on both a forward earnings yield and B/P basis.

WCM Investment Management LLC
(“WCM”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to WCM was 27.78%.

Attribution analysis reveals that the majority of the strategy’s outperformance can be attributed to stock selection.

From a sector allocation perspective, information technology (overweight) was the largest positive contributor to the relative performance, followed by real estate (underweight) and materials (underweight). On the other hand, health care (overweight) detracted from the relative performance, as did communication services (overweight).

Looking at stock selection, financials (Qualitas Controladora, S.A.B. De C.V., Wise PLC, M&A Research Institute Inc.) was the best performing sector relative to the benchmark, followed by communication services (Baltic Classifieds Group PLC, Hemnet AB, Scout24 SE) and health care (JEOL Ltd., Stevanato Group Societa’ Per Azioni, medmix AG). On the flipside, industrials (Hensoldt AG, Visional, Inc., Nihon M&A Center Holdings Inc.) was the worst performing sector relative to the benchmark, followed by consumer discretionary (Campus Activewear Ltd., Ariston Holding NV, Lovisa Holdings Limited) and information technology (Xiamen Faratronic Co., Ltd., Endava PLC - ADR, CI&T Inc).

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager Mid Cap Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 12.33% for Class A shares compared to 16.24% for the Morningstar U.S. Mid Cap Index.

JNL Multi-Manager Mid Cap Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by allocation amount a variety of mid capitalization growth and value strategies managed by unaffiliated Sub-Advisers. Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

The Fund underperformed the benchmark as four of the five sleeves trailed their respective benchmarks. KAR (+22.69%) was the only sleeve to outperform its benchmark during the year. Champlain (+16.70%) and Nuance (+7.59%) were the biggest relative detractors while Victory (+10.84%) and ClearBridge (+14.12%) only slightly underperformed their benchmarks. Selection in consumer discretionary was an area of weakness for both Champlain and ClearBridge in the year. Significantly overweighting consumer discretionary and health care detracted from the relative performance of Nuance. Stock selection in industrials and consumer discretionary were a drag on the relative performance of Nuance.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

Champlain Investments Partners, LLC ("Champlain")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Champlain was 28.09%.

During the first half of the year, stock selection was a meaningful drag, including the strategy's first complete failure in its history with SVB Financial Group. Notwithstanding, the strategy was ahead of the benchmark after the second quarter. While the back half of the year was notably defined by the market's reaction to the class of weight loss drugs known as GLP-1s and expectations for a U.S. Federal Reserve pivot, it was primarily this strategy's holdings in consumer oriented businesses that significantly detracted from the year's relative performance. This was due to both stock specific issues within specialty retail, and the strategy's limited exposure to the more cyclical industries within the sector including hotels, restaurants and leisure, and household durables. Additionally, this strategy's all weather industrial holdings underperformed the benchmark's industrials which includes the very cyclical industries the investment process excludes. There were some bright spots, most notably the historically strong 65% return in information technology ("IT") which benefited both from strong stock selection in software and IT services, and the Artificial Intelligence tailwind, with positive contribution from the allocation overweight of the outperforming software, IT services, and technology hardware, storage & peripherals industries. The strategy's financials holdings also underperformed for the full year, mostly attributed to the previously mentioned failure of SVG Financial Group.

Despite the continued headwinds that the investment process has encountered recently and over the three year period, we continue to high grade this strategy's holdings with a significant focus on all-weather business models, high returns (Gross Profitability), pricing power, efficient capital allocation, and problem solving companies as well as those that make necessary or helpful products. Though monetary and fiscal policy have rewarded cyclical and lower quality business models in recent years, we expect shares of high quality companies that are under indexed to energy, labor, and capital will win the coming decade on a real return basis as some form of debt monetization diminishes the purchasing power of the U.S. Dollar.

ClearBridge Investments, LLC ("ClearBridge")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to ClearBridge was 7.39%.

The strategy underperformed its benchmark over the year ended December 31, 2023, due to overall stock selection. Relative to the benchmark, stock selection in information technology ("IT"), consumer discretionary, financials, materials, utilities and real estate, and an overweight allocation to consumer staples detracted from performance. The impact of the downdraft in financials in the Spring of 2023 significantly hurt the performance of the strategy and we were unable to make up for that over the remainder of the year. Conversely, stock selection in consumer staples, industrials, health care, energy, and communication services, an overweight allocation to industrials and underweight to utilities benefited performance.

Stock selection in IT was the leading detractor from relative performance during the year. Several holdings, such as critical event management software company Everbridge, Inc., faced headwinds stemming from elongated sales cycles as economic uncertainty delayed customer purchases. Conversely, stock selection in consumer staples was the largest contributor to relative performance, with cosmetics and prestige fragrance company Coty Inc. and convenience store operator Casey's General Stores, Inc. generating positive returns as they continued to execute on their strategic plans and improvements.

The banking crisis in March resulted in a retreat in both Western Alliance Bancorporation and First Republic Bank's share prices, making them the two worst performing holdings and substantial detractors from overall performance in the year. However, we moved swiftly to exit these positions and added high quality super regionals, such as The PNC Financial Services Group, Inc. and U.S. Bancorp, which are likely to be long term beneficiaries of deposit reshuffling. We also are not certain the worst is over for regional banks, so we prefer the strongest balance sheets.

Although the optimism surrounding the soft landing narrative has helped embolden the market, the last year also proved how quickly investor sentiment can change. We firmly believe that our process of building a strategy of high quality companies with strong balance sheets and long term growth of earnings and free cash flow will help us to successfully navigate whatever challenges 2024 brings.

Kayne Anderson Rudnick Investment Management, LLC ("KAR")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to KAR was 17.88%.

The investment objective of the strategy is to achieve a return meaningfully above that of the benchmark and to achieve this return objective with a strategy that exhibits similar risk characteristics.

Strong stock selection in consumer discretionary and consumer staples and an overweight to information technology contributed to relative outperformance. Stock selection was challenged in health care and industrials while an overweight to consumer staples detracted from relative results.

The biggest contributors to performance were Fair Isaac Corporation and Celsius Holdings, Inc. Fair Isaac Corporation's shares outperformed as the company saw an improving trajectory in sales volumes as it worked through disruptions resulting from price increases and the discontinuation of sales to Russia and Belarus. We believe these price increases have also led to progress in restoring profitability towards management's targets, although more work still needs to be done. Celsius Holdings, Inc.'s shares experienced significant outperformance over the last year driven by expanding distribution and consumption as well as the bankruptcy of a notable competitor. We believe the biggest highlight was the landmark distribution deal with a multinational beverage corporation that took an ownership stake and a board seat and finally, after years of trying, found a path to successfully break into the energy drink category. Our view is that Celsius has room to grow in the U.S. and is starting to expand distribution internationally. Other top contributors included MercadoLibre S.R.L., Goosehead Insurance, Inc., and Gartner, Inc.

The biggest detractors to performance were Signature Bank and Paycom Software, Inc. Signature Bank's largely uninsured deposit base that had exposure to venture capital and digital asset customers left it in a precarious position after the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank. Preemptively, regulators shut down the banks and orchestrated a sale of most of the deposits to New York Community Bancorp, Inc., which left the equity with no intrinsic value. Paycom Software, Inc.'s BETI product is a self-service payroll tool that allows employees to review pay for accuracy prior to running payroll which helps reduce errors and saves human resource and accounting teams hours of labor each pay period. This company's strategy missed revenue estimates due to some errors occurring in BETI, which guided shares down for the year. Over time, we believe the company should be able to effectively monetize BETI. Other bottom contributors included Silk Road Medical, Inc., Bill Holdings, Inc., and Mettler-Toledo International Inc.

2023 proved to be an outstanding year for the capital markets. As we began 2023, investors braced for an imminent recession, which never materialized. The S&P 500 Index advanced 26.29%. Large capitalization growth stocks, as measured by the Russell 1000 Growth Index, were the best performers this year gaining 42.68% for the year. Value stocks, as measured by the Russell 1000 Value Index, lagged returning 11.46% for the year. The Magnificent Seven (Alphabet Inc., Amazon.com, Inc., Apple Inc., Meta Platforms, Inc., Microsoft Corporation, NVIDIA Corporation, and Tesla Inc.) were responsible for most of the outperformance by large growth stocks during 2023. Market breadth started to improve in the fourth quarter with the Russell 2000 Index of small capitalization stocks advancing 14.03% and up 16.93% for the year. After a year of worry over interest rate increases, falling interest rates due to the continued improvement in the inflation outlook was the principal reason equities performed so well. From our perspective, returns in 2024 are unlikely to be as robust as 2023 but are likely to generate returns in line with earnings growth. We expect that 2024 will experience more volatility due to the election, which is likely to be contentious.

Nuance Investments, LLC ("Nuance")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Nuance was 19.97%.

During the year the strategy's positioning within industrials was a detractor from performance.

Mueller Water Products, Inc. outperformed; however, the largest industrials holding, 3M Company, underperformed in the year. 3M Company remains one of the top holdings and is an investment the strategy added to over the course of the year.

Additionally, there was no exposure to several outperforming industries within industrials, such as Installed Building Products, Inc., which was up more than 60% in 2023, and is an area where our work indicates widespread over earning and over valuation.

The stock selection within real estate was a detractor from performance as Healthcare Realty Trust Incorporated and Healthpeak OP, LLC underperformed.

The positioning in materials contributed to performance as the strategy was underweight this underperforming sector and the investments in Ecolab Inc. and AptarGroup, Inc. outperformed.

The underweight positioning to information technology detracted from performance.

Within utilities, the investments in several water utilities including SJW Group and California Water Service Group underperformed in the year, detracting from performance.

The stock selection within financials contributed to performance as the investments in The Charles Schwab Corporation and Reinsurance Group of America, Incorporated outperformed in the year, but they were offset by underperformance in Northern Trust Corporation and The Travelers Companies, Inc.

Within consumer staples, the stock selection was a positive contributor to performance due to the investments in Henkel AG & Co. KGaA, Cal-Maine Foods, Inc. and Beiersdorf Aktiengesellschaft. These more than offset underperformance from the investment in Kimberly-Clark Corporation and the overweight of the sector.

Health care was a detractor from performance. The investments in Dentsply Sirona Inc. and Waters Corporation outperformed. However, that was not sufficient to overcome underperformance from the investments in Baxter International Inc. and Globus Medical, Inc. and the overweight positioning to what was an underperforming sector.

Finally, the cash position was a drag on performance in the year.

Victory Capital Management Inc.
("Victory")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Victory was 26.67%.

For the year, stock selection was the primary driver of relative underperformance. Sector allocation partially offset the unfavorable impact of selection for the year.

Index returns were positive across most major economic sectors for the year and varied widely.

Specifically, for the strategy, stock selection in industrials was the largest detractor from relative performance for the year. An overweight in the top performing sector partially offset the unfavorable impact of selection. Stock selection in consumer discretionary, financials, real estate and energy also detracted from relative return. Additionally, the strategy's cash position was a drag on performance for the year. Conversely, stock selection in materials, information technology ("IT"), communication services, and health care contributed to relative return for the year. An underweight in utilities as well as an overweight in IT also augmented performance.

The strategy's weight in industrials, consumer discretionary, health care, energy, utilities, financials and consumer staples increased during the year. Conversely, the strategy's weight in IT, communication services, real estate and materials decreased during the year. As of December 31, 2023, the strategy was overweight in industrials, materials, consumer discretionary and IT, relative to the benchmark. By contrast, the strategy was underweight in utilities, consumer staples, energy, communication services, financials, health care, and real estate, relative to the benchmark. Sector weighting is a byproduct of the bottom-up security selection process and not a result of top down tactical decisions.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager Small Cap Growth Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 16.32% for Class A shares compared to 22.61% for the Morningstar U.S. Small Cap Broad Growth Extended Index.

JNL Multi-Manager Small Cap Growth Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by investing in a variety of small cap growth strategies managed by unaffiliated investment managers ("Sub-Advisers"). Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

The Fund underperformed the benchmark during the year as none of the six sleeves were able to outperform the benchmark. Granahan (+9.00%) posted the worst results. Stock picking was challenged, especially in industrials, financials, and information technology. RS (+20.65%) also trailed in the year with poor stock picks coming in health care and financials. WCM (+17.58%), Segall (+19.28%), Baron (+22.16%), and KAR (+20.98%) all moderately underperformed the benchmark because of poor stock selection.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

Baron Capital ("Baron")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Baron was 13.28%.

Investments in Information Technology ("IT"), consumer discretionary, and financials coupled with lack of exposure to lagging utilities and energy stocks added the most value. Within IT, higher exposure to this better performing sector and outperformance of software holdings SentinelOne, Inc., GitLab Inc., CyberArk Software Ltd., and Couchbase, Inc. along with restaurant focused software as a service vendor PAR Technology Corporation contributed the most to relative results. Strength in consumer discretionary came from digital sports betting company DraftKings Inc. and specialty flooring retailer Floor & Decor Holdings, Inc. Kinsale Capitale Group, Inc. was responsible for most of the relative gains in financials after the company's shares rose sharply during the year.

Investments in health care and industrials hurt relative results. Adverse stock selection in health care detracted the most from relative performance, driven by sharp losses from carotid artery disease treatment leader Silk Road Medical, Inc. and breast aesthetics company Establishment Labs Holdings Inc. Most other securities in the sector also weighed on relative performance. Weakness in industrials was due to share price declines from Montrose Environmental Group, Inc., IDEX Corporation, and Mercury Systems, Inc.

The strategy invests with the goal of exceeding benchmark returns. We focus primarily on the longer term potential and valuation of the investments. We manage risk across multiple dimensions including position size (generally under 4%), industry (generally in line with the benchmark, although underexposed to cyclical energy and materials), and growth type (balanced among high growth, growth at a reasonable price, and non-correlated investments).

Large cap stocks (and particularly the "Magnificent Seven" mega cap tech stocks) rallied harder than small caps in 2023. We believe that 2024 will be the "year of small cap," as interest rates decline and relative valuations return to more normalized levels, with small caps garnering bigger multiples than large, versus the opposite situation that now exists. We also believe that our style of stock picking active management driven by experientially based fundamental analysis will be amply rewarded.

Granahan Investment Management, LLC ("Granahan")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Granahan was 19.73%.

Weakness in the strategy came from stock selection in consumer discretionary, industrials, financials and information technology. The strategy has strong stock selection in health care, consumer staples and basic materials. What strength there was in the strategy came from our Pioneer lifecycle category.

The largest detractors for 2023 were Silicon Valley Bank (Financials), Digital Turbine USA, Inc, Paycom Software, Inc., and Ameresco, Inc.

The best performers for 2023 were The Vita Coco Company, Inc., Quanterix Corporation, Axon Enterprise, Inc., and Indie Semiconductor, Inc.

Despite stock markets being up in 2023, many smaller companies struggled as valuations and earnings were significantly impacted by higher interest rates and inflation. It is important to note that the S&P 500 and the Russell 2000, on an equally weighted basis, both hit lows in October from their peaks in 2021. This suggests we have been in a bear market for most stocks for two years despite strong performance coming from some of the largest market cap stocks. While there are plenty of macro uncertainties still in the mix, we see noteworthy positives. In the middle of December, the U.S. Federal Reserve signaled a more dovish stance on interest rates and lower inflation data points have also been encouraging.

Earnings for small cap companies, as measured by the Russell 2000, are estimated to increase almost 20% in 2024 following two years of declining earnings per share. We believe our strategy valuations are at extremely low levels, and a handful of our portfolio companies are trading at or near cash levels. While it is not possible to predict outcomes, this combination of low valuations and expected growth in earnings leaves us optimistic regarding the outlook for our strategies.

Kayne Anderson Rudnick Investment Management, LLC (“KAR”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to KAR was 24.38%.

The investment objective of the sleeve is to achieve a return meaningfully above that of the benchmark and to achieve this return objective with a Fund that exhibits lower overall risk characteristics.

Good stock selection in communication services and industrials and an underweight in health care and energy contributed positively to performance. Poor stock selection in information technology, health care and consumer discretionary and an overweight in financials detracted from performance.

The biggest contributors to performance were Dream Finders Homes, Inc., Auto Trader Group PLC, Fair Isaac Corporation and West Pharmaceutical Services, Inc. We believe Dream Finders Homes, Inc. continues to benefit from the generally underbuilt U.S. housing market, resulting in relatively resilient new home demand in the face of rising interest rates. In its latest biannual earnings report, Auto Trader Group PLC reported revenue and profit growth in the backdrop of a resilient used car market in the United Kingdom. In our view the company's ability to use pricing and product to offset flat to down unit volumes caused it to outperform investor expectations and caused shares to outperform in the year. Fair Isaac Corporation's shares outperformed as the company saw an improving trajectory in sales volumes as it worked through disruptions resulting from price increases and the discontinuation of sales to Russia and Belarus. West Pharmaceutical Services, Inc. experienced consistent results in 2023, propelled by its strong product differentiation.

The biggest detractors to performance were Fox Factory Holding Corp., Bill Holdings, Inc., Silk Road Medical, Inc. and Atrion Corporation. Fox Factory Holding Corp. continued to suffer from a downdraft in its Specialty Sports business. Bill Holdings, Inc. reported growth in both revenues and profitability over the past four quarters. However, macroeconomic headwinds facing its small-to-medium business customer base slowed transaction volume flowing through the company's payment solutions. Silk Road Medical, Inc. reported weak numbers in the third quarter, confirming fears that the business was experiencing increased competition from other methods as well as stubbornly low adoption among trained physicians. The company's CEO stepped down and the strategy exited its position as the company's competitive position was not as strong as anticipated. During 2023, Atrion Corporation experienced weakness because of soft customer ordering patterns and continued supply chain challenges for its new consoles platform.

From our perspective, returns in 2024 are unlikely to be as robust as 2023 but are likely to generate returns in line with earnings growth. We expect that 2024 will experience more volatility due to the election, which is likely to be contentious.

Victory RS Investments (“RS Investments”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to RS Investments was 8.66%.

Relative to the benchmark, selection in consumer staples and consumer discretionary was most additive to performance but selection in health care reduced these results.

Within consumer staples, the largest driver of outperformance was BellRing Brands, Inc., an operator of three major brands in the convenient nutrition sector, including Premier Protein as part of their specialized ready-to-drink (RTD) beverages. We own BellRing due to its strong market position, with Premier Protein leading the shakes/RTD subcategory, aligning with the growing trends of health, convenience, and snacking in the convenient nutrition market, and its attractive financial profile with solid growth potential, high customer loyalty, and innovative products. The stock performed exceptionally well during 2023 given strong execution, leveraging effective brand strategies and market investments to drive a very strong increase in net sales, showcasing their adeptness in market responsiveness and strategic management.

Within health care, one of the largest drivers of relative underperformance was Inspire Medical Systems, Inc., a medical technology company focused on the development and commercialization of minimally invasive solutions for patients with obstructive sleep apnea (OSA). We own Inspire given its promising minimally invasive stimulation therapy for sleep apnea, relatively low current market penetration and anticipated catalysts supporting outsized growth, and durable competitive advantages. The stock underwhelmed in 2023 given concerns over the impact of GLP1s (weight loss drugs) on the sleep apnea space. The negative market reaction stemmed from concerns raised during an earnings call about how GLP1s might affect Inspire Medical Systems, Inc.'s position in the sleep apnea market. We believe this concern is overblown and that GLP1s may have a path where they increase the funnel for new patients that are currently disqualified given their high body mass.

Segall Bryant & Hamill (“Segall”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Segall was 9.12%.

During this year, the strategy underperformed its primary benchmark, primarily due to asset allocation as security selection had a negative impact on performance. Given strong equity returns, cash allocation was a headwind to relative performance.

The sectors that contributed most to the strategy's performance relative to its benchmark in the year were financials and industrials. Conversely, the sectors that detracted most from the strategy's performance relative to its benchmark in the year were health care and information technology.

Significant positive contributors included semiconductor equipment manufacturer Onto Innovation Inc. and trucking company Saia, Inc. Onto Innovation Inc. showed resilience in results versus its peers and benefited from its inspection tool wins used in artificial intelligence chip manufacturing. Saia, Inc. executed well on internal initiatives to drive sustained growth, including improved service pricing and further network expansion.

Major detractors included neurovascular disease medical device manufacturer Silk Road Medical, Inc. and biologics manufacturer Avid Bioservices, Inc., both of which were sold during the year. Silk Road Medical, Inc. struggled from disruptions in its sales organization along with increased competitive headwinds from alternative procedures. Avid Bioservices, Inc. underperformed due to the weaker financing environment and more conservative spending decisions by its biopharmaceutical customer base.

As of the end of 2023, the strategy was overweight primarily health care, energy, and information technology sectors and underweight primarily in consumer discretionary and real estate. The strategy's largest sector increases relative to the benchmark in the year were in energy and financials. The strategy's largest decrease relative to the benchmark in the year was in consumer discretionary. Changes in relative weightings were a function of stock specific considerations. While the impact of higher interest rates will take some time to filter through the economy, the prospects of lower inflation along with continued economic resilience have seemingly improved. Regardless of the volatile economic backdrop, we remain focused, as always, on building a strategy of fundamentally stable growth companies that can thrive across the entire economic cycle.

WCM Investment Management, LLC
("WCM")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to WCM was 21.77%.

Stock selection was the driver of the strategy's relative underperformance with minimal overall impacts from allocation.

From an allocation perspective, the strategy's underweights to utilities (worst in the benchmark), communication services and real estate were the primary contributors. The strategy's overweight to consumer discretionary and industrials also contributed. For selection, financials was the strategy's most significant contributor to relative performance. The picks in insurance and capital markets drove the gains in the sector. Selection was also strong in energy (oil gas and consumable fuels) and communication services (interactive media).

Looking at allocation, the primary detractor was the underweight to information technology. For selection the strategy saw broad based negative contribution. Consumer discretionary was the most significant detractor, driven by picks in auto components and leisure products. Selection in health care (health care providers and services and life sciences tools and services) and information technology (software) also materially detracted during the trailing 1-year period. The picks in industrial, materials, and consumer staples also detracted vis-a-vis selection, but their impact was relatively modest.

We feel temperament is an important advantage and it is even more important to keep our emotions in check as we navigate the ongoing market uncertainty where macro factors continue to have a strong influence. We will focus on finding what we see as rare in small caps: capital allocators who can reinvest back into their business, when others either are not able or choose not to. We continue to look for the next generation of leaders who focus on what they can control, instead of the macro factors, and who have the with the determination to invest capital in their corporate culture and in assets that can produce returns at higher future returns.

This strategy does not use derivatives as part of the investment process.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager Small Cap Value Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 20.97% for Class A shares compared to 16.27% for the Morningstar U.S. Small Cap Broad Value Extended Index.

JNL Multi-Manager Small Cap Value Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by investing in a variety of small cap value strategies managed by unaffiliated investment managers ("Sub-Advisers"). Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

Four of the five sleeves were ahead of the benchmark for the year, leading to outperformance at the Fund level. Cooke & Bieler (+28.97%) delivered the best performance, hurt by weak stock picks in industrials and consumer discretionary. WCM (+24.51%), Reinhart (+24.89%), and Congress (+17.25%) also outperformed by meaningful amounts. River Road (+15.30%) underperformed the benchmark with positive effects from stock selections across industrials and consumer discretionary.

Congress Asset Management Company LLP ("Congress")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Congress was 17.87%.

The market rallied strongly into the end of the year. The key catalyst was a shift to more dovish language by U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") Chairman Powell which stands in contrast to increased political polarization and increased geopolitical conflicts. The shift in language by Fed Chairman Powell contributed to a stronger recovery in value oriented sectors such as financials, recovered from the failures of First Republic, Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank to become the best performing sector in the fourth quarter.

As economic footing remains volatile, we remain focused on companies with stronger balance sheets and better cash flows that can better navigate a more unstable economic environment. In less innovative sectors such as financials and energy, we are looking for opportunities in companies that can navigate higher interest rates and take advantage of higher oil prices, respectively. In more innovative sectors such as health care and technology, we are looking for opportunities in companies that can fund new product research and maintain their competitive advantages in a volatile economic environment with tighter capital markets. We expect this dynamic to persist as interest rates remain elevated, adding to crosscurrents in geopolitics, inflation, and Fed policies.

Stock selection was the key driver of the relative performance and was best in consumer discretionary and communication services. Positive stock selection was driven by Western Alliance Bancorporation, M/I Homes, Inc., Patrick Industries, Inc., Skechers

U.S.A., Inc., and Group 1 Automotive, Inc. Negative stock selection was worst in utilities and industrials and was driven by HomeStreet, Inc., Sandy Spring Bancorp, Inc., Cross Country Healthcare, Inc., Acadia Healthcare Company, Inc. and Black Hills Corporation.

Cooke & Bieler, L.P. ("Cooke & Bieler")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Cooke & Bieler was 21.71%.

Though 2023 began with still stubborn inflation and more interest rate hikes, continued geopolitical crises, a regional banking collapse, and more, U.S. stocks advanced sharply by year end with all major indices posting double-digit returns in the fourth quarter. Sentiment improved markedly in early November following initial indications that the U.S. Federal Reserve's ("Fed") tightening cycle could be over. The rally strengthened and broadened from there, fueled by continuing economic momentum, encouraging signs of disinflation, and declining interest rates.

For the year, the strategy significantly outperformed the benchmark, with both stock selection and sector allocation contributing meaningfully to results. Stock selection within industrials was by far the most significant contributor to outperformance, with strength coming from building products companies PGT Innovations, Inc. and American Woodmark Corporation.

Financials and information technology holdings also contributed to results. Stock selection within energy and consumer discretionary were the largest offsets to these positive results due to drags from holdings like DMC Global Inc. and Hanesbrands Inc. From an allocation perspective, the overweight to more cyclically exposed industrials and consumer discretionary, the two top benchmark performers, were the most notable tailwinds. The underweight to utilities and financials also benefited the strategy. Partially offsetting these positive results, the overweight to consumer staples and underweight to materials were slight drags on performance.

Markets enter 2024 against a promising economic backdrop. Having seemingly tamed inflation with minimal economic slowing, the Fed is expected to cut rates as early as this spring. Taking a longer view, equity indices are broadly unchanged from 2022, suggesting there is room for upside if macro conditions cooperate, and we continue to find value in areas where investor expectations remain muted. That said, inflation expectations have been almost uniformly wrong over the last several years, and geopolitical crises and domestic political dysfunction remain concerns. Therefore, risk control is a priority, which starts with our insistence on attractive valuations, cash flows, and balance sheets. We believe our focus on downside protection combined with our emphasis on identifying businesses that can compound value across economic environments is particularly well suited to the challenges that may await.

Reinhart Partners, LLC (“Reinhart”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to Reinhart was 20.51%.

The strategy had a strong year returning 24.89% gross of fees and outperforming the Morningstar US Small Broad Value Extended Index by 862 basis points. We were pleased to outperform despite a strong, risk on rally during the fourth quarter amid moderating inflation and the prospect of lower interest rates in 2024. The strategy has historically done well during periods of volatility, and the last year was no different, as market narratives oscillated between “pending recession” and a “soft landing”.

Another dynamic that continued to play out during the year was small cap stocks underperforming large cap stocks – mega cap stocks in particular. The narrowness of market leadership in 2023 has been extensively noted, with a handful of mega cap stocks (i.e., the “Magnificent Seven”) driving most of the positive performance for the broader market. In fact, when comparing the market value of the Russell 1000 large cap index to the Russell 2000 small cap index, the deviation in recent periods has not been this skewed since the early 1990’s. Therefore, we continue to believe small cap equities present attractive opportunities.

By and large, the strategy companies reported strong financial results and remain well positioned to grow earnings power for years to come. Our focus on investing in companies with strong competitive positions has allowed these encouraging outcomes, particularly amidst a challenging economic backdrop. Looking forward, while the strategy does not use macro forecasts to make investment decisions, we would not be surprised to see a choppy economic environment as companies continue to battle wage inflation while faced with potential price give backs and decelerating demand. We think the strategies holdings are, on average, more resilient and less cyclical and would expect them to hold up well in that scenario.

River Road Asset Management, LLC (“River Road”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to River Road was 19.52%.

The sectors with the highest contribution to relative return during the year were information technology (“IT”) and utilities. IT benefited from positive stock selection and an overweight allocation. Utilities benefited from positive stock selection, partially offset by an overweight allocation.

The holdings with the highest contribution to active return in the portfolio were Vistra Corp., ePlus inc., and Vontier Corporation.

The sectors with the lowest contribution to relative return during the year were consumer discretionary and industrials. Consumer discretionary suffered from negative stock selection and industrials suffered from negative stock selection, partially offset by an overweight allocation.

The holdings with the lowest contribution to active return in the strategy were Advance Auto Parts, Inc., Leslie’s, Inc., Premier, Inc., and LKQ Corporation.

The objective of the strategy is to outperform the Russell 2500 Value by 200 to 400 basis points gross of fees annualized over a market cycle. The strategy does not employ volatility targets; however, the strategy seeks to minimize return volatility and the potential for permanent loss of capital by employing a policy of balanced diversification and a structured sell discipline.

Following a dip in October, stocks surged in November and December as the economy remained robust, inflation continued to cool, and U.S. Treasury yields declined. Small caps lagged large caps for 2023, growth outperformed value across all market caps.

WCM Investment Management, LLC (“WCM”)

At December 31, 2023, the Fund’s allocation to WCM was 20.38%.

From an allocation perspective, the strategy’s overweight to industrials was the primary contributor. The strategy’s avoidance of utilities and the strategy’s overweight to information technology were additional strong contributors. Finally, the strategy’s underweights to communication services and real estate also contributed to relative performance.

From a selection standpoint, the strategy’s picks in industrials and financials were the primary contributors. Picks within consumer staples also contributed to performance.

From an allocation perspective, the strategy’s overweighting to health care was the primary detractor, followed closely by its overweight to consumer staples. Additionally, the strategy’s underweighting to financials, and more specifically its avoidance of banks, also hurt relative performance.

From a selection standpoint, the strategy’s picks in health care were the largest source of underperformance, followed by consumer discretionary, which was another meaningful detractor. Lastly, the strategy’s picks in real estate also negatively impacted relative performance.

The strategy’s quality emphasis has resulted in healthy outperformance against its benchmark over the year. Coming off the heels of a strong finish to 2022, the market continued its run through the first two quarters of 2023. However, performance took a sharp turn in Q3 as U.S. equities tumbled amidst recessionary fears and continued monetary tightening from the U.S. Federal Reserve (“Fed”). Following the sudden downturn, small caps roared back to life late in the year, as the Fed stopped its interest rate hike campaign amidst moderating inflation data.

Fortunately, strong stock selection has been the highlight for the strategy over the year, as the strategy’s high quality businesses outperformed during the market’s upswings and have shown strong downside protection during the midyear pullback. The team continues to believe that the strategy’s quality emphasis will be rewarded over the long-term, regardless of shorter-term market conditions.

The strategy does not utilize derivatives as part of its investment process.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL Multi-Manager U.S. Select Equity Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 22.82% for Class A shares compared to 27.18% for the Morningstar U.S. Target Market Exposure Index.

The JNL Multi-Manager International Small Cap Fund seeks to achieve its investment objective by allocating to U.S. equity strategies managed by unaffiliated Sub-Advisers. Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others, and uses its own methodology for selecting investments. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

During 2023, the Fund underperformed its benchmark due to weakness from the GQG sleeve. GQG (+19.61%) underperformance relative to the benchmark was mainly due to overweighting poor performing sectors including energy and health care. WCM (+31.37%) outperformed over the period year as result of significant returns from holdings including Amazon.com, Inc., Advanced Micro Devices Inc., and Floor & Décor Holdings, Inc.

GQG Partners, LLC ("GQG")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to GQG was 49.80%.

From a sector perspective, during the year the strategy was helped on a relative basis by stock selection in information technology ("IT"), an underweight to consumer staples and stock selection in health care. Relative performance was negatively impacted by an overweight to energy, an underweight to IT and consumer discretionary.

The investment objective of the strategy is to achieve long term capital appreciation.

In 2023, the Morningstar US Target Market Exposure Index gained 27.19% with nine of the benchmark's 11 sectors posting gains for the year. We believe decelerating inflation in the U.S. and Europe, as well as the increasing likelihood of looser monetary policy in 2024, were the primary drivers of the broad based rally in equity markets in the fourth quarter. We are constructive on the equity market as the U.S. Federal Reserve appears to be near the end of its tightening cycle. The top returning sectors included IT (+61.3%), communication services (+56.1%), and consumer discretionary (+43.6%). Utilities and energy were the only sectors to post negative returns for the year, declining (-6.7%) and (-1.2%) respectively.

IT is the largest overweight in the strategy with financials and consumer staples the largest underweights. One potential headwind would be a more aggressive tightening of monetary policy than currently expected that could impact the valuation of higher multiple IT names. Another would be a rally in the banks, driven by catalysts that may include better than expected earnings or a more friendly regulatory environment, where we currently have only modest exposure. The strategy may underperform in either of those scenarios. We expect to monitor the relevant data closely and adapt to the changing environment.

WCM Investment Management ("WCM")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to WCM was 50.20%.

Attribution analysis reveals that most of the strategy's outperformance can be attributed to stock selection.

From a sector allocation perspective, information technology (overweight) was the largest positive contributor to the relative performance, followed by utilities (no weight) and energy (underweight). On the other hand, communication services (no weight) detracted from the relative performance, as did health care (underweight) and financials (overweight).

Looking at stock selection, consumer discretionary (Amazon.com, Inc., Floor & Decor Holdings, Inc.) was the best performing sector relative to the benchmark, followed by consumer staples (Costco Wholesale Corporation, Monster Beverage 1990 Corporation) and health care (Intuitive Surgical, Inc., McKesson Corporation, DexCom, Inc.). On the flipside, information technology (Bill Holdings, Inc.) was the worst performing sector relative to the benchmark, followed by materials (Corteva, Inc).

The investment objective of the Fund is to match the performance of the S&P 500 Index. The Fund is constructed to mirror the S&P 500 Index to provide long-term capital growth.

The Fund seeks to invest under normal circumstances at least 80% of its assets (net assets plus the amount of any borrowings made for investment purposes) in the stocks in the S&P 500 Index in proportion to their market capitalization weighting in the S&P 500 Index. For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/AB Sustainable Global Thematic Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 15.76% for Class A shares compared to 22.13% for the Morningstar Global Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

For the year, the Fund delivered positive absolute returns but underperformed the benchmark. During the fourth quarter, sector selection contributed to overall returns while stock selection was negative. An overweight to technology and an underweight to energy contributed the most. In contrast, stock selection within consumer staples and an overweight to healthcare detracted.

TopBuild Corp, an installer and specialty distributor of insulation and building material products from empowerment, contributed. Shares traded higher amid rate tailwinds and management's cautious optimism that residential demand could hold up relatively well in the first half of 2024, supported by improving trends in single family housing starts and a steady cadence of growth in multifamily units.

Fair Isaac Corporation ("FICO"), a predictive analytics company best known for its market dominant FICO score, from Empowerment, contributed as shares were buoyed by strong fourth quarter results and solid 2024 guidance.

BYD Company Limited, an electric vehicle ("EV") manufacturer from climate, detracted. Shares declined along with Chinese EV peers on recent pricing promotions into the end of the year as the company looks to shed some inventory, which has been slightly above average.

Alcon, an eyecare product maker from health, detracted after the company reported mixed earnings results and trimmed the high end of its guidance, citing foreign exchange headwinds and weaker surgical segment results.

Amid all the noise, the themes continue to move forward as broad shifts in the global economy run their course. Global challenges such as access to healthcare and infrastructure needs are not solved overnight. Entering the year with a more defensive mindset did not help; however, the core thematic exposures continue to offer robust growth potential.

We believe a Fund with high quality companies on the right side of change, trading at reasonable valuations, provides a strong combination for the current market environment. Resilient fundamentals and narrow leadership in the market have created a powerful setup for a group of companies that fit this profile.

Within information, communication and technologies, the latest earnings results from a number of leaders like NVIDIA Corporation, AMD, and the cloud providers demonstrate that society's move toward intelligent digital economies is leading to increased demand for bigger networks, more powerful and energy efficient data centers, and new consumption models. We continue to expect the key artificial intelligence ("AI") enablers and the adopters that successfully integrate AI in their applications will enjoy strong tailwinds in the near term.

Within transportation, secular shifts in automotives continue—EV global sales rose more than 50% through September 2023. EV adoption continues to grow, but it will not be a straight line. Additionally, automotive original equipment manufacturer ("OEM") stocks are still in a discovery phase, learning what features have the greatest appeal with consumers. We're also seeing a standardization of charging standards in the U.S., which should encourage further adoption.

In health, there have been a few dynamics at play in 2023. During the early days of COVID-19, customers ordered more to ensure supply. In 2023, we saw the reverse as lead times decreased. We are going through a period of inventory digestion along with macroeconomic weakness in China. The underlying growth rate of their customers (biopharmaceutical production) remains in the double digits. The market enthusiasm around weight loss has also drawn investor attention and buying activity, further depressing valuations for companies outside this group.

Rather than chasing the market's chosen few, our focus continues to be on identifying powerful themes and the companies best positioned to capitalize on these opportunities. This approach has delivered strong results for our clients over time and we are highly confident in its ability to do so in the future.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/AQR Large Cap Defensive Style Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 10.57% for Class A shares compared to 27.18% for the Morningstar U.S. Target Market Exposure Index.

While the year was generally volatile, with changing U.S. Federal Reserve expectations and somewhat persistent inflation, U.S. equity markets performed positively on the back of strong rallies within technology and Artificial Intelligence related companies. Given the Fund's defensive investment style, looking to provide returns similar to equity markets over the long term while realizing lower volatility, the Fund tends to maintain a beta below 1.0 relative to the benchmark. This was ultimately a performance headwind throughout 2023 as the Fund was underweight the small number of stocks that saw outsized positive performance.

More specifically, sector selection drove underperformance versus the benchmark, while stock selection also detracted, but to a lesser extent. Within sector selection, an underweight position in information technology ("IT") as well as overweight positions in consumer staples and health care are the leading detractors. Stock selection within IT, communication services, and consumer discretionary were other notable detractors throughout 2023.

The Fund ended the year with a diversified portfolio of 166 stocks. The largest sector overweight relative to the benchmark as of quarter end were in consumer staples, health care, and industrials. The largest underweights relative to the benchmark are in IT, consumer discretionary, and financials. Derivatives performed as expected and allowed the Fund to gain exposure to the equity market.

2023 provided a turbulent environment for equity investors. Markets were whipsawed by China's reopening, United States regional banking turmoil, the euphoria surrounding advances in artificial intelligence, war in the Middle East, and surprisingly dynamic moves in bond yields. Tensions between the United States and China intensified over the year, creating a more ambiguous environment for companies' dependent on both markets.

Continuing interest rate increases have pushed investors towards proven and profitable assets that offer predictability. We are skeptical that this approach provides the best long-term rewards, given the inherent uncertainty of the future and the structural changes we see emerging.

Throughout all this, we remain focused on identifying opportunities in the rapidly changing global economy. We are committed to maintaining a high active share, keeping portfolio turnover low, and focusing on company fundamentals. We continue to develop broad and deep knowledge networks and engage with diverse sources of information to enhance our ability to form differentiated views. It is by sticking to this process that we believe we can deliver on the fund's objective, to deliver significant outperformance over periods of 5 years plus.

Holdings linked to the continued digitization of the economy performed particularly strongly over the year including music streaming leader Spotify Technology S.A., Latin American ecommerce leader MercadoLibre S.R.L and those supplying the 'picks and shovels' to the digital revolution including NVIDIA Corporation and ASML Holding N.V. Healthcare related holdings performed particularly poorly. These include Moderna, Inc., Genmab A/S, M3, Inc. and Illumina, Inc.

We believe the world is swinging from an era of abundance to an era of limitation: in the supply of capital; in environmental resources; in trust between society and corporations – and between established and rising political power blocks. These seismic shifts will impact every company in every sector. We think our philosophy of long-term growth investing is exceptionally well suited to a time of uncertainty and rapid change.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Baillie Gifford U.S. Equity Growth Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 45.80% for Class A shares compared to 40.25% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Growth Index.

A reversal in tone by the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") prompted renewed optimism about interest rate cuts in 2024 and that the U.S. might deliver reduced inflation without a recession, described as a "soft landing".

The Fund's holdings have shored up their finances and become more cost conscious. This enables their continued pursuit of large opportunities. Longer acting developments like the deployment of artificial intelligence ("AI") tools become more significant over the five-year investment horizon. The Fund is invested in companies enabling consumer and business shifts online that are still early in their transition. It includes innovative healthcare companies enabling a shift towards more personalized and affordable healthcare, companies electrifying transport, supporting local business growth, and changing education.

Shopify Inc., the largest contributor to performance, provides merchant software enabling businesses to sell online. Shopify Inc. cut costs, jettisoned its lower margin logistics business, and is now more focused on advancing AI opportunities. The company is well placed to consolidate its position as infrastructure for online retail.

Gamified education company Duolingo, Inc. contributed to outperformance. It is growing rapidly owing to the high adoption of its language learning application. Its founder believes AI could approximate a human tutor in five years. Duolingo, Inc. has a substantial opportunity to satisfy more of the world's rapidly growing demand for learning.

Moderna, Inc. was the years largest detractor from performance. The COVID-19 vaccine maker's revenues declined faster than we expected. Its mRNA technology has potential applications ranging from infectious diseases and autoimmune diseases to cancers, as well as personalized medicines. Moderna, Inc.'s progress is not captured by the current share price. Novocure Ltd., an innovative cancer treatment business, was a large detractor. Conviction in holding the shares fell, and the position was sold.

The investment objective is to deliver significant outperformance over periods of five years plus. The Fund seeks to meet this objective by identifying exceptional growth businesses and owning them for long enough that the advantages of their business models and cultural strengths become the dominant drivers of their stock prices.

The Fund is positioned to benefit from conditions where stock prices are driven by the long-term progress of businesses. In contrast, stock market prices are currently highly sensitive to short term news flow, particularly anything suggesting a higher for longer inflation outlook.

performance. Selection within health care, partially offset by an overweight, positively impacted returns. Within fixed income, duration management, via tactical positioning along the U.S. yield curve and exposure to short-term European rates, was additive. Exposure to credit, notably high yield bonds, also contributed.

Within equities, selection in information technology ("IT"), industrials, communication services, consumer discretionary, and materials detracted from performance. Positioning in index futures used to manage the overall beta of the Fund over the year negatively impacted relative returns. An overweight to energy also detracted, though partially offset by selection. Within fixed income, exposure to agency mortgages weighed on performance over the year. Exposure to gold related securities, as well as exposure to cash and cash equivalents, primarily held as hedges against market volatility, dragged on performance as both equity and bond markets were positive for the year.

Over the year, the Fund's overall equity allocation increased. Within equities, the Fund increased exposure to the U.S. and Japan. From a sector perspective, the Fund increased exposure to IT, financials, industrials, consumer discretionary and consumer staples, and decreased exposure to energy and materials. The Fund's allocation to fixed income decreased. Within fixed income, the Fund increased exposure to non-U.S. government bonds and high yield corporate credit, and decreased exposure to U.S. government debt and investment grade credit. The Fund's allocation to commodity related securities remained essentially unchanged. Reflecting the above changes, the Fund's cash equivalents decreased from 18% to 7% of net assets.

Relative to its benchmark, the Fund was overweight equities and underweight fixed income, with exposure to cash equivalents and to a lesser extent, commodities. Within equities, the Fund was overweight IT, consumer discretionary, health care, industrials, energy and communication services, and underweight real estate and materials. From a regional perspective, the Fund was overweight the U.S. and Japan, and underweight Australia. Within fixed income, the Fund was underweight developed market government bonds and overweight corporate credit, securitized debt, and bank loans. From a duration perspective, the total portfolio duration was 2.0 years, up from 1.8 years as of December 31, 2022, vs. a benchmark duration of 2.4 years (total portfolio duration assumes equity duration of 0). From a currency perspective, the Fund's largest overweight was the Japanese Yen and largest underweight the Euro.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/BlackRock Global Allocation Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 13.95% for Class A shares compared to 23.74% for the Morningstar Developed Markets Target Market Exposure Index (Net). For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/BlackRock Global Natural Resources Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of -1.61% for Class A shares compared to 3.38% for the S&P Global Natural Resources Index (Net).

The underperformance was primarily driven by negative stock selection in the mining sub-sector of the Fund. The mining sector underperformed in 2023, as China's reopening rebound was softer than expected. Despite this, China's industrial metal demand held up well, and the Caixin China General Manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index ended the year at 50.8. Mined commodities were up across the board in 2023, with copper and iron ore prices rising. The gold and silver prices also rose. Increased political tensions in the Middle East, declining real interest rates and U.S. Dollar weakness acted as tailwinds for the gold price.

Energy equities faced a headwind in the form of market concerns about economic growth and the potential for this to impact on oil demand. However, oil demand increased through 2023. Over the course of the year, on the oil supply side, non-OPEC supply growth was stronger than expected, particularly outside of U.S. shale, whilst Russian oil production remained higher than expected. OPEC announced several cuts to target oil production levels to support oil prices. An apparent lack of cohesion within OPEC for its announced oil production cuts at the beginning of December led to a fading of the oil price impact from the cuts. Brent Crude Oil and West Texas Intermediate oil prices fell.

Within agriculture, food prices remained volatile. However, towards the end of the year,

U.S. wheat prices fell, as supply increased due to higher-than-expected production in Russia and Australia as well as the extension of the Black Sea Grain Initiative.

At a stock level, the Fund's overweight position in First Quantum Minerals Ltd. was the largest detractor from returns. Panama's government announced the closure of the Cobre Panama mine after the Supreme Court ruled that the concession granted to the company was unconstitutional.

Weakness in lithium price impacted the Fund's industrial mineral holdings, with Albemarle Corporation being one of the largest detractors from performance over the year.

On the other hand, the Fund's overweight exposure to Wheaton Precious Metals Corp. contributed positively, as the company's share price reacted positively to the underlying gold price moves.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

The Fund's investment objective is to seek long-term growth of capital. At the sector level, information technology ("IT") was the largest contributor to relative performance driven by an overweight to semiconductors and semiconductor equipment industry. Notably, overweight positions in NVIDIA Corporation and Broadcom Inc. added to returns as both companies benefited from potential tailwinds from growth in artificial intelligence. Elsewhere in IT, an overweight position in Intuit, Inc. was a notable contributor. Shares of Intuit Inc. outperformed as the company reiterated its full year guidance, signaling confidence in its strategic direction and market position.

The largest detractors to relative performance were Nike, Inc. and Match Group, Inc. Shares of Match Group, Inc. struggled during the year as the company posted disappointing earnings amid the deteriorating macroeconomic conditions. The Fund's cash position proved costly amid rising stock prices.

The Fund entered into forward foreign currency contracts to settle transactions denominated in foreign currencies. These derivative transactions did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance. Due to a combination of Fund trading activity and market movements during the year, the largest increases in active weights, relative to the Russell 1000 Growth, were in IT and health care. Conversely, the largest reductions in active sector weights were in communication services and industrials.

Most of the Fund's success in the year came from strong stock selection across a handful of sectors. Fund holdings in financials, industrials, and technology, as well as an overweight to industrials and technology contributed to relative performance. Conversely, holdings in energy, as well as an overweight position to consumer staples and health care offset some of the outperformance. The top contributor to return was jet engine manufacturer, Rolls-Royce PLC. Other notable contributors included banking & financial services company, UniCredit S.p.A., and electronic equipment manufacturer, Samsung Electronics Co Ltd. The largest detractor was rolling stock, signaling, and services provider for the rail industry, Alstom. Additional notable detractors included alcoholic beverage distributor, Diageo PLC, and airport operator, Beijing Capital International Airport Co., Ltd.

We currently expect global growth to decelerate in 2024. U.S. consumers should exhaust their excess COVID-19 related savings in early 2024 and ballooning fiscal deficits in developed countries may prevent government spending largesse for the next several years. Any sharp deceleration in real gross domestic product growth will likely prompt interest rate cuts from the U.S. Federal Reserve and other major developed country central banks. Despite signs of disinflation in the G7 countries, we cannot exclude the possibility of persistent core inflation above central bank targets in 2024.

We continue to focus on the long-term rewards from operational restructuring. In our experience, capable and motivated management teams of underearning companies can and often do boost returns to shareholders. Importantly, we aim to identify and buy these stocks many months before markets perceive positive catalysts. Many of the global and international Fund holdings we expect to outperform in 2024, in our view, add operational restructuring upside potential to the Fund across a range of sectors, such as consumer discretionary, industrials, consumer staples and information technology.

mega cap growth holdings that were led by graphics chip maker NVIDIA Corporation, cloud and software provider Microsoft Corporation, iPhone maker Apple Inc., as well as mid cap enterprise software makers Palo Alto Networks, Inc. and Salesforce, Inc. The rise of generative artificial intelligence as well as a peak in interest rates supported most of these names as well as Amazon.com, Inc. in consumer discretionary. Selection in communication services and industrials were also supportive of performance, led by Meta Platforms, Inc. and Netflix, Inc., which benefited from improved cost discipline, as well as solid execution from rideshare operator Uber Technologies and MRO supplier distributor W. W. Grainger, Inc.

Meanwhile, the Fund's overall sector allocation detracted from relative performance. An underweight to outperforming IT was the main detractor from relative performance as the Fund was underweight several mega cap growth stocks that led market performance. An overweight exposure to health care was also a headwind due to a rotation out of defensive sectors that led to weakness in managed care provider UnitedHealth Group incorporated as well as negative implications for medical device makers from positive clinical trials for GLP-1 diabetes and obesity drugs that weighed on continuous glucose monitoring maker DexCom, Inc.

After the first three quarters of market returns dominated by the Magnificent Seven, market breadth improved to end 2023. We believe broadening participation should be supportive of the diversified approach. We expect a macro deceleration to lead to greater volatility in the year ahead. Against this backdrop, we want to own growth companies with cash flow support and where estimates have partly reset.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/DoubleLine Core Fixed Income Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 6.03% for Class A shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

Despite generating a positive return in 2023, fixed income was overshadowed by a massive equity rally that few saw coming. Many market participants expected a U.S. recession where traditional fixed income would outperform riskier credit. However, the recession did not materialize, and riskier credit rallied as investors shrugged off a regional banking crisis, debt ceiling worries, and geopolitical tensions, albeit not without some short-term volatility in markets. Through October, traditional fixed income returns were modestly negative, but strong November and December returns flipped many fixed income sectors positive for the year. Some of the largest contributions to returns came from investment grade corporates, agency mortgage-backed securities, and U.S. Treasuries. These longer duration sectors benefitted most from the significant rate rally at the end of the year. Non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities were another top contributor to performance as the sector enjoyed high carry and saw credit spread tightening, while home prices remained resilient. High yield corporates, bank loans, and emerging market bonds also contributed to performance due to the spread tightening seen during the year, particularly in the last two months of the year. The only sector to detract from performance was commercial mortgage-backed securities, as the sector remains distressed by high delinquency rates, falling collateral values, and concerns around ability to refinance.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

We have an actively managed value oriented approach to delivering the best possible risk adjusted returns. Avoiding potential problem credits and minimizing credit losses are a critical function of the Fund's credit analysis. Over 2023, emerging markets external sovereign bonds and external corporate bonds posted positive returns in a volatile year marked by easing global inflationary pressures which supported a fourth quarter shift in market sentiment from expectations for a "higher for longer" interest rate environment to growing bets for monetary policy easing in the new year. The outbreak in October of conflict in the Middle East added to geopolitical risks, which remained elevated amid the ongoing Russia-Ukraine war which extended into a second year. The positive performance of the J.P. Morgan Emerging Market Bond Index (EMBI) Global Diversified, which tracks sovereign bonds, was driven mainly by credit spread compression, with the spread over U.S. Treasuries tightening by 68 basis points ("bps") over the year to end at 384 bps, with a smaller contribution from generally lower U.S. Treasury yields. Despite significant volatility observed in rates over the course of the year, the U.S. Treasury yield curve steepened only slightly on an end of year basis with 2-year

The Fund's underperformance for the year was attributed in part to its higher exposure to corporate credits relative to the benchmark as the corporate index underperformed the sovereign index over the year. The Fund's duration stood at 5.16 years as of December 31, 2023 (versus the benchmark's duration of 6.77 years as of December 31, 2022). In our view, the risk appetite in 2024 will likely be driven by expectations around developed market central banks' monetary policy cycles, global growth and inflation concerns, the U.S. and international election cycles, China's fiscal and monetary stimulus measures and geopolitical spillover from the Israel-Hamas conflict. Other factors to watch include China-Taiwan tensions, the Russia-Ukraine war, the Chinese property sector and stress in the global banking sector.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/DoubleLine Shiller Enhanced CAPE Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 27.42% for Class A shares compared to 26.29% for the S&P 500 Index.

The objective of the Fund is to outperform the returns of the benchmark. The Fund seeks to do this through exposure to the Shiller Barclays CAPE® U.S. Sector Index ("CAPE Index"), collateralized by a short-intermediate duration multi-sector fixed income portfolio. The CAPE Index outperformed the benchmark in the year, returning 27.82%. Over the course of the year, the CAPE Index was allocated to eight sectors: consumer discretionary, consumer staples, communication services, financials, healthcare, materials, information technology ("IT") and real estate. Six of the eight sector allocations appreciated in value during the year with two declining. The best performing sector allocations were consumer discretionary and IT while the biggest detractors were consumer staples and healthcare. During the year, the Fund's exposure to the CAPE Index was achieved entirely through equity index swap agreements. The use of these derivative instruments allowed the strategy to gain exposure to the CAPE index, which added to the Fund's performance. The fixed income collateral portfolio contributed positively to the Fund's returns in 2023. Every fixed income sector of the collateral portfolio appreciated in value during the year. The two best performing sectors in the collateral portfolio were non-agency mortgage-backed securities and collateralized loan obligations. The two most sluggish sectors were commercial mortgage-backed securities and U.S. government securities, but both added to the Fund's returns.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/DoubleLine Total Return Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 5.09% for Class A shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

The Fund's underperformance was driven by its overweight allocation to structured credit sectors relative to the benchmark, as credit spreads broadly tightened during the year.

Despite generating a positive return in 2023, fixed income was overshadowed by a massive equity rally that few saw coming. Many market participants expected a U.S. recession where traditional fixed income would outperform riskier credit. However, the recession did not materialize, and riskier credit rallied as investors shrugged off a regional banking crisis, debt ceiling worries, and geopolitical tensions, albeit not without some short-term volatility in markets. Through October, traditional fixed income returns were modestly negative, but strong November and December returns flipped many fixed income sectors positive for the year. Every sector in the Fund generated a positive return, with the largest contribution coming from U.S. Treasuries and agency mortgage-backed securities as these longer duration sectors benefitted most from the significant rate rally at the end of the year. Non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities were another top contributor to performance as the sector enjoyed high carry and saw credit spread tightening, while home prices remained resilient. Though still generating positive returns, the Fund's exposure to floating rate and shorter-duration sectors, namely commercial mortgage-backed securities and collateralized loan obligations, contributed the least to performance. These sectors experienced less significant price gains than longer-duration, fixed rate bonds.

supporting performance among the various asset classes for the year.

Signs of continued tight labor markets and lessening though still elevated inflation readings pressured the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") to remain on a restrictive path, prompting several hikes during the first half of the year. During the fourth quarter, however, Fed officials expressed growing comfort with the existing inflationary environment, hinting that a shift towards a more accommodative policy stance was on the horizon. This seemingly dovish pivot spurred a relief rally across most asset classes to close out the year, as market participants interpreted this as long awaited clarity that the next move the Fed makes will be rate cuts instead of hikes.

The plus sector allocation was a primary contributor to outperformance. Leveraged loans fared well, as demand for this bespoke asset class remained elevated due in part to the unique floating rate feature embedded in these bonds. High yield also delivered favorably, as this more equity correlated sector participated in steady gains throughout the year. A small overweight to emerging markets contributed to a lesser extent. This area benefited from a decline in the price of energy and related inputs.

Looking at the core investment grade portion, a modest underweight to corporates acted slightly against returns, though the downside was more than offset by superior security selection, most notably among banking and communications issuers. An underweight to agency mortgage-backed securities was additive, since these securities finished among the worst performing components of the investable opportunity set. Lastly, underweight positioning in U.S. Treasuries was beneficial, given most non-Treasury sectors outperformed for the year.

The overall contribution from derivatives was marginally positive, driven by holdings of Treasury futures contracts which ultimately capitalized on the periodic volatility taking place across the rates complex during the year. The contribution from exposure to interest rate swaps was muted.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Fidelity Institutional Asset Management Total Bond Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 6.70% for Class A shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

The Fund uses a disciplined, bottom-up investment process with an equal emphasis on quality and valuation which aims to identify mispricing. As a result, the Fund's relative performance tends to be driven primarily by stock selection.

The Fund invests in the shares of companies that own or operate infrastructure assets. The investment objective of the Fund is to seek total return through growth of capital and inflation protected income.

The Fund invests in a range of global listed infrastructure assets including toll roads, airports, railroads, utilities and renewables, energy midstream, wireless towers, and data centers.

Central banks adopted a "higher for longer" interest rate narrative for much of the year. This triggered a sharp rise in government bond yields, with the U.S. 10-year real bond yield reaching multi year highs in October. Elevated interest rates weighed on the valuation multiples of defensive assets, including global listed infrastructure. Meanwhile, inflation, which infrastructure assets can often pass on to the end user, subsided. Against this backdrop, global listed infrastructure delivered modestly positive returns during the year.

Spanish airport operator AENA S.M.E., S.A. (+49.44%) gained after reporting solid earnings results for the third quarter and providing a positive outlook for passenger volumes in late 2023 and early 2024. ASUR (+31.94%) enjoyed a strong finish to the year after details emerged of favorable terms for its 2024 - 2028 regulatory period, including an increase in the maximum tariff it is permitted to charge airlines. Brazil's largest toll road operator CCR S.A. (+44.72%) climbed as investors were drawn to its attractive valuation multiples.

However, Chinese gas utility ENN Energy Holdings Limited (-45.76%) underperformed after announcing disappointing second quarter earnings, owing to reduced demand from commercial and industrial customers. Mobile tower stock Crown Castle Inc. (-10.24%) fell on concerns for higher interest rates. U.S. utility NextEra Energy, Inc. (-25.30%) fell after dividend growth forecasts for its renewables focused subsidiary NextEra Energy Partners, LP were revised lower.

Global listed infrastructure underperformed global equities in 2023 owing to rising interest rates and a broad based shift away from defensive assets. Earnings within the asset class have proved resilient, and valuations are now appealing. The team remains focused on bottom-up stock picking, seeking mispriced, good quality companies trading at attractive relative valuations.

spread widening during the year and higher government yields, while equity holdings decreased. The Fund's cash position also rose slightly during the year.

The Fund's equity allocation contributed to absolute returns during the year, driven by solid performance within information technology, financials and communication services. Within the Fund's equity holdings, gains from Broadcom Inc. and Intel Corporation assisted returns within information technology, while Union Pacific Corporation added value within industrials. This performance offset losses among health care, utilities and energy stocks.

Aggressive monetary policy tightening from the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") affected the Fund's fixed income investments during the year as rates rose sharply and economic growth continued to slow. As a result, U.S. Treasury holdings detracted from absolute performance due to their interest rate sensitivity. This was offset by a large allocation to health care, in addition to contributions from consumer discretionary and financials. The best performing fixed income holdings during the year were Community Health Systems, Inc., Tenet Healthcare Corporation, along with JBS USA Food Company.

The Fund used derivatives as a tool in seeking efficient management of certain risks (such as interest rate risk), as well as in providing an additional source of income to help the Fund reach its income generating objective.

We retain a cautious view on equities as markets digest the lagged effect of monetary policy tightening, the steepening of the yield curve, the cost of capital implications as rates remain higher for longer, and geopolitical risks. Within fixed income, we continue to believe that the Fed will remain vigilant to ensure inflation does not return, and we continue to expect a lack of fiscal constraint to weigh on balancing budgets. These factors should provide attractive yields while hedging the Fund against volatility should we see a drawdown in risk assets. In our assessment, average yields in corporate investment grade offer compelling income opportunities, as the attractiveness of higher quality assets has increased over the past 18 months. While the high-yield market also offers attractive yields, we remain balanced and selective due to the potential for higher refinancing costs and the possibility of an economic slowdown hurting companies' fundamentals.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/GQG Emerging Markets Equity Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 28.95% for Class A shares compared to 10.19% for the Morningstar Emerging Markets Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

From a sector perspective, during the year the Fund was helped on a relative basis by stock selection in utilities, consumer staples, and energy. Relative performance was negatively impacted by an underweight to information technology and an overweight to consumer staples. From a country perspective, the Fund was helped on a relative basis by stock selection in India, an underweight to China, and an overweight to Brazil. Relative performance was negatively impacted by stock selection in United States, an underweight to Taiwan and South Korea.

The investment objective of the fund is to achieve long-term capital appreciation.

Energy, utilities, and consumer staples are the largest overweight in the Fund with consumer discretionary, communication services, and information technology the largest underweight. Potential headwinds include a material slowdown in global economic activity, which could drive lower demand for crude oil and a sharp decline in commodity prices negatively impacting earnings growth in energy. A more dovish tone from central banks regarding their intention to raise interest rates could spark a risk on environment in the global equity markets and a rerating of high multiple names in communication services and information technology that the Fund is underweight. The Fund may underperform in that scenario.

On a country basis, India and Brazil are the largest overweight while China, Taiwan, and South Korea are the largest underweight. Potential headwinds include a sustained spike in oil prices since India is a large crude importer. However, if oil stays near current levels, we expect only a modest increase in India's inflation rate, which we believe has trended in the mid-single digits for years and is manageable, in our opinion. A strong rally in information technology names in Asia, where we are currently underweight, may also lead to underperformance for the Fund.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Harris Oakmark Global Equity Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 19.99% for Class A shares compared to 23.74% for the Morningstar Developed Markets Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

Relative to the benchmark, stock selection detracted for the year while sector weightings contributed to overall performance. On a geographic basis, stock selection in the U.S. and Japan generated the top results, while holdings in France and the U.K. generated the worst relative performance. On a sector basis, holdings in consumer staples and energy delivered the best relative results. A less than benchmark weighting in information technology and stock selection in consumer discretionary were the largest relative detractors.

The primary long-term goal for this Fund is to achieve a high absolute rate of return.

Major global markets generally showed strength in 2023 following a challenging 2022. The calendar year included a presence of heightened volatility. Central banks throughout the world continued to tighten monetary policy to combat elevated inflation.

Alphabet Inc. was a top performer during the year. The communication services company reported generally strong first, second and third quarter results during the year, in our view. During the second quarter, the company's new generative artificial intelligence search product launched its beta version. We continue to believe Alphabet Inc. offers attractive upside.

Worldline was a bottom performer during the year. In October, the French multinational payment and transactional services company delivered a weaker than expected set of results and the stock fell significantly on the news. Management reduced growth estimates citing two factors which management confirmed are both transitory on a call.

At year end, the Fund's equities spanned ten countries in five regions. The weighting in the U.S. increased throughout the year, while Germany was decreased. The Fund gained exposure to Japan. The Fund ended 2023 with exposure to nine sectors, gaining exposure to energy through the purchases of ConocoPhillips and Phillips 66. The Fund's weighting in health care and energy increased and decreased in consumer discretionary and financials.

Generally, the Fund's only derivative use is foreign currency forwards for hedging purposes. The Fund may implement currency hedging when it views that a currency is overvalued by more than 20% of its estimated purchasing power parity. The Fund does not have any hedges.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Heitman U.S. Focused Real Estate Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 9.66% for Class A shares compared to 11.33% for the Morningstar U.S. REIT Index.

The stock selection environment for 2023 can be bifurcated into pre and post November 1, 2023. We believe the post November 1, 2023, period can be characterized by speculation of U.S. Federal Reserve rate cuts and recession avoidance, which caused a near historic reversal in the bearish REIT sentiment being expressed by hedge funds and generalist equity investors. In our view, the resulting impact on the REIT market was outperformance in sectors and specific securities, which remain fundamentally challenged. This outperformance of REITs with negative fundamentals created a difficult securities selection environment and a reversal of the Fund's outperformance year to date, in our view.

Regarding attribution, digital infrastructure, residential, and triple net outperformed. Digital infrastructure was driven by Digital Realty Trust, Inc. that outperformed due to accelerating data center demand being further propelled by cloud computing and artificial intelligence deployments. Within the residential sector, the underweight position to Sunbelt apartments helped, as the Sunbelt region faces record development deliveries. Within triple net, the overweight position in EPR Properties drove the return on a positive outcome of the Regal Cinemas bankruptcy process, a critical tenant for the REIT, resulting in favorable lease terms.

The underperformance was led by retail. The overweight positions in Kimco Realty Corporation and Kite Realty Group Trust and underweight position to Simon Property Group, Inc. caused retail underperformance. The underperformance of Kimco Realty Corporation was a result of the announcement to acquire a competing REIT. While we believe the acquisition will add value based on our fundamental research, the market typically takes a cautious approach to the outcome. The reason for the Simon Property Group, Inc. outperformance may be attributed to the market dynamics of the incrementally more bullish sentiment on REITs and outperformance of lower quality companies in the final months of the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Invesco Diversified Dividend Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 8.54% for Class A shares compared to 14.34% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Value Index.

Within the Fund's style specific index, communication services and information technology ("IT") were the best performing sectors, while utilities and health care were the worst performing sectors during the year. Our focus on high quality, attractively valued dividend paying companies was a headwind in 2023 as the market was led by more growth oriented, non-dividend paying stocks that don't fit our disciplined approach. Stock selection and an underweight position in communication services detracted the most from relative return, as the sector posted strong gains during the year. The Fund didn't own several of the year's best performers in this sector, including Meta Platforms, Inc., and Alphabet Inc., because they don't pay a dividend, which was a meaningful detractor from relative return. Alternatively, stock selection in industrials, consumer staples and IT were the largest positive contributors to relative return.

During the year, holdings in IT and industrials were among the largest contributors to the Fund's absolute performance. Microsoft Corporation was the largest individual contributor to overall Fund performance. Shares of the company rose as management reported strong financial results for 2023. Microsoft Corporation also benefitted from investor excitement around how artificial intelligence could supplement Microsoft Corporation's already robust technology platform. Motion and control technologies leader Parker-Hannifin Corporation was also a large contributor to overall performance. The company benefitted from strong results in 2023, including record sales. The company also said the Meggitt integration and synergies are ahead of schedule and raised forward guidance.

Holdings within energy and financials were among the largest detractors from absolute Fund performance. Integrated energy company Chevron Corporation was the largest detractor from overall performance during the year. Shares of the company fell along with energy in general toward the end of the year as oil prices declined. While management also released disappointing results for the third quarter of 2023, we believe many of the headwinds were driven by timing issues that will be resolved in the fourth quarter. Financial services company The Charles Schwab Corporation was also among the largest detractors from overall performance. The company underperformed following the banking crisis that occurred in March. The Charles Schwab Corporation was heavily scrutinized for unrealized losses in their securities portfolio following the U.S. Federal Reserves' tightening campaign. Unlike the banks that failed, The Charles Schwab Corporation has a highly diversified deposit base across 34 million accounts and most deposits are insured.

During the year, the team took advantage of market volatility by initiating several new positions and exiting several positions as well. While sector exposure versus the benchmark remains generally balanced, the largest overweight positions were in utilities and consumer staples. The largest underweight positions were in communication services and IT as of yearend.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Invesco Global Growth Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 34.59% for Class A shares compared to 22.13% for the Morningstar Global Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

The Fund is focused on investing in high quality companies with sustainable competitive advantages, that are positioned to benefit from long term structural growth themes. The team seeks to own industry leaders, with global scalability, that compound economic returns over time.

The Fund outperformed the index in 10 of the 11 Global Industry Classification Standard sectors. Stock selection in communication services, real estate, health care, financials and industrials added to relative performance. Underweight allocations to consumer staples, energy, materials and utilities, as well as an overweight allocation to information technology, also added to relative performance. Stock selection in consumer discretionary detracted from relative performance.

Meta Platforms, Inc. and Alphabet Inc. were the two greatest individual contributors to performance during the year. Meta Platforms, Inc. has maintained its strong network effect advantage, with its user base growing across all applications, engagement remaining resilient and further monetization improvements being seen in recent quarters. Reels continues to attract more advertisers and its impact on the firm's advertising revenue is now neutral, unlike its negative effect in the past. Alphabet Inc. is one of the best positioned companies across today's major waves of innovation. This year, the company has been firing on all cylinders: advertising demand has stabilized, search and YouTube growth have been accelerating, cloud growth remains resilient and the company's focus on efficiency has been bearing fruit.

JD.com, Inc. and Meituan were the two greatest individual detractors from performance during the year. JD.com, Inc. is a major player in Chinese ecommerce, offering a wide selection of authentic products at competitive prices, with fast and reliable delivery. The shares have trended lower over the course of the year, as the Chinese post COVID-19 recovery has been underwhelming. Meituan is the largest food delivery service in China. The stock price has been down over the past year due to margin pressures and slowing growth amidst stiff competition.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Invesco Small Cap Growth Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 12.12% for Class A shares compared to 22.61% for the Morningstar U.S. Small Cap Broad Growth Extended Index.

Relative underperformance was driven by stock selection in information technology, consumer discretionary, health care, consumer staples, and financials. An energy overweight was a detractor; however, this was offset by positive stock selection. and ancillary cash position also detracted from relative performance. Alternatively, stock selection in real estate and materials contributed to relative performance. Relative underweights in real estate, communication services, materials, financial, and utilities helped results as well. An overweight in information technology added to relative returns.

The leading absolute detractor during the year was Revance Therapeutics, Inc., which announced a new pricing strategy to reduce the price for Daxxify to price closer to parity with similar but competing product neuromodulator, Botox, despite having a longer period of efficacy. This initiative created concerns that a 'pricing war' may begin, leading to significant multiple compression despite solid fundamentals.

Medical device company, Insulet Corporation, sold off on concerns over the potential impact of GLP-1 diabetes drugs on the sales of Insulet Corporation's insulin pumps. Insulet Corporation's CEO also highlighted the potential for patients with diabetes to delay beginning insulin therapy, which would be a headwind to the business.

Halozyne Therapeutics, Inc. faced headwinds after company leadership delivered underwhelming forward guidance. A rotation into more cyclical names away from defensive health care names such as Halozyne Therapeutics, Inc. also weighed on the share price.

Popular quick service chicken wing restaurant, Wingstop Inc, was the leading contributor on an absolute basis. The company continues to generate industry leading sales and earnings per share growth driven by growing adoption of their new sandwich platform, a rollout to third party delivery platforms, and increasing digital penetration. Same store sales growth is also industry leading and viewed very favorable given it was driven by higher customer traffic while pricing remained fairly stable.

Manhattan Associates, Inc. was also among the leading absolute contributors. The enterprise software solution company has put together a string of impressive fundamental results, which we believe is a reflection of its strong position in the marketplace and strength from new product rollouts. With most software companies struggling to add new customers, Manhattan Associates, Inc. has excelled and delivered best in class results.

Saia, Inc. is a less than truckload transportation company and rallied during the year on strong profitability results despite a difficult macroeconomic backdrop. Saia, Inc. is also expanding its network footprint, which bodes well for future profitability. The less than truckload shipping company has executed well on pricing and experienced an increase in shipments per workday and an increase in tonnage per workday implying improving shipping trends.

Rate increases have slowed the economy and dampened inflation, although the labor market remains healthy. Elevated consumer savings and a strong job market have supported consumption despite higher interest rates and a decelerating economy. The recent rally in low quality stocks signals that the market thinks the U.S. Federal Reserve has achieved a soft landing, has finished raising interest rates and is ready to pivot to easing. However, we remain cautious. We scaled back some defensive positioning and introduced more cyclical, but are aware of potential risks, so we seek to maintain balanced positioning. We see artificial intelligence as a significant technology trend with wide ranging implications for technology investment, employment and productivity enhancements moving forward.

The objective of the Fund is to maximize long-term total return by using significant flexibility to invest in a broad range of equity, fixed income, and alternative asset classes in the U.S. and other markets throughout the world. Over the year, asset allocation decisions and manager alpha both detracted from returns.

The global economy's evasion of recession – marked by a stronger economy, meaningful disinflation, and a triumphant end to rate hikes – powered both equity and fixed income markets higher in 2023.

During the year, the Fund increased exposure to equities by adding to U.S. large cap and emerging markets equities amid an increasingly positive outlook and expectations of a soft landing. Fixed Income exposure also increased, as the Fund added to U.S. duration.

As we head into 2024, a combination of solid activity and falling inflation has seen the market narrative increasingly shift towards the prospects of a soft landing and earlier than expected rate cuts. The Fund marginally increased overall equities, preferring the defensive characteristics of U.S. equities. As central banks move from hiking to cutting in 2024, we expect both stocks and bonds to benefit. Amid receding inflation, stock and bond correlations should eventually fall towards neutral levels. Moderate growth and less restrictive policy are supportive for asset returns in the first half of 2024. We continue to incorporate selective opportunities within credit, preferring higher quality carry assets. We remain active in our positioning and are assessing larger tilts as we continue to monitor developments in global economies, as inflation concerns ease and growth concerns arise.

The Fund uses equity and fixed income futures for efficient portfolio management. The Fund also invests in currency futures and FX forwards. Derivatives positions negatively impacted the Fund during the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/JPMorgan Hedged Equity Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 15.70% for Class A shares compared to 11.82% for the CBOE S&P 500 BuyWrite Index.

The S&P 500 Index ended 2023 strong, returning +26.29% for the year. Information technology and communication services were the best performing sectors, returning +57.84% and +55.80%, respectively. Utilities and energy were the only sectors which closed the year in red returning -7.08% and -1.33%, respectively.

True to form, the Fund performed as designed, participating in a strong portion of the market upside throughout the year with a lower volatility profile versus the S&P 500 Total Return Index.

U.S. equity market valuations remain elevated, and consensus stands that volatility is likely to continue in 2024, given uncertainty around the U.S. Federal Reserve and a potential soft landing. If U.S. equity markets are more sideways in 2024, this backdrop is constructive for the Fund. Each quarter, the Fund can participate in 3.5-5.5% of market upside on average. Therefore, if the market is up moderately throughout the year, the Fund has the potential to capture a significant portion. Alternatively, if the S&P 500 declines during 2024, the Fund has an explicit quarterly downside hedge in place to help investors capture less of the downside when markets sell off.

The sector neutral underlying equity Fund is well positioned for the uncertainties and volatility that may be experienced in 2024 and is constructed through fundamental research and risk-aware Fund construction. Additionally, if interest rates remain elevated for longer or if there is an increase in volatility, these factors can be net tailwinds to the Fund. When volatility or interest rates are high, the Fund's quarterly upside cap can increase, indicating more potential upside with no change to the downside hedge. As a reminder, we use options purely for risk mitigation purposes in the Fund. Options detracted from returns during the year. By forgoing a portion of the market upside, we can provide our clients with an explicit downside hedge each quarter. In addition, we use futures in the Fund for cash management.

Given lower prospects for a traditional 60/40 portfolio over the next 5 to 15 years, we've seen many clients think about the Fund to get 60/40-like risk exposure, while adding more to equities and reducing some fixed income.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/JPMorgan MidCap Growth Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 23.21% for Class A shares compared to 20.84% for the Morningstar U.S. Mid Cap Broad Growth Index.

Overweight allocations within health care and cash were the primary detractors in 2023. Stock selection in energy and an underweight within consumer staples contributed.

SolarEdge Technologies Ltd. Was the top detractor in 2023. Results were challenged in the back half of the year largely due to weaker U.S. residential solar demand and channel destocking. Growing competition in the U.S. and globally also weighed on returns and as a result we eliminated our position in the fourth quarter. A position in First Republic Bank also detracted as the stock came under pressure due to substantial deposit outflows in the wake of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank collapsing. We subsequently exited our position in the first quarter.

An overweight position in Palo Alto Networks, Inc. was the top contributor in 2023 on the back of strong earnings reports throughout the year as budgets for cybersecurity proved to be more resilient than the market was anticipating. The company remains a top overweight. An underweight position in Enphase Energy, Inc. also contributed as higher rates and increasing competition weighed on demand. The Fund increased its underweight position by fully exiting the name in the first quarter.

The Fund's positioning is balanced between high quality cyclical and secular growth opportunities across a variety of sectors. After entering 2023 as a top underweight, information technology now represents an overweight position as the team selectively added to quality growth franchises with reset expectations and solid fundamentals. Health care remains a top overweight despite narrowing throughout the year as the team pared back from more defensive names that held up well in 2022. Consumer discretionary is also a top overweight as the team added to select technology enabled companies. Consumer staples and real estate represent the top underweights.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/JPMorgan U.S. Government & Quality Bond Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 4.16% for Class A shares compared to 4.09% for the Bloomberg U.S. Government Index.

We incorporate a bottom up, value-oriented approach to fixed income investment management and central to this approach is: identifying securities that are priced inefficiently; making sector allocation decisions based on a broad sector outlook, utilizing expected return and valuation analysis; managing the yield curve, with an emphasis on evaluating relative risk/reward relationships along the yield curve; and managing portfolio duration used primarily as a risk-control measure.

The U.S. Treasury yield curve spread between two and 10-year maturities bull steepened 11 basis points, with the yield of the two-year note decreasing 80 basis points to 4.25% and the yield of the 10-year Treasury moving 69 basis points lower to 3.88%. As a result, the Fund's duration posture and yield curve positioning were net negative for performance. The Fund finished the year underweight in the 5 to 7-year segment of the yield curve, overweight the 10 to 20-year segment, and underweight the 30-year bucket. The Fund remained shorter duration compared to the benchmark, finishing the year at 5.8 years versus the benchmark duration of 6.1 years.

From a sector perspective, an underweight to Treasury debt was positive as spread sectors outperformed comparable duration Treasuries. Specifically, the Fund's allocation to agency mortgage-backed securities was the primary driver of returns during the year. Allocations to commercial mortgage-backed securities and investment grade credit were also positive during the year.

Growth and inflationary pressures have moderated to the point that the U.S. economy now appears to be in a soft landing. After almost two years of relentless monetary tightening, policymakers acknowledged that they had seen enough improvement in inflation to call a truce and have even opened the door to rate cuts in 2024. Expecting a hawkish bias from the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed"), markets were caught off guard with this dovish stance, and an impressive rally began across all asset classes into the end of 2023. While core inflation currently remains high relative to the Fed's target, the disinflation trends remain well entrenched and should bring inflation readings back into the 2% range next year.

The primary risk to our forecast is a reacceleration of inflation that causes central banks to return to tightening. As each quarter passes, businesses and households are progressively adjusting to the higher cost of financing any expenditures. A global shortage in housing stock and low unemployment may mean that delayed consumption starts up again at a time when inflation is still above most central bank targets. Also on the horizon in 2024 are the U.S. presidential election and elections in 39 other countries, including the UK, Taiwan, Mexico, Indonesia, Venezuela, and Pakistan. The potential for geopolitical tensions to escalate remains high and is not yet priced into bond markets. Interestingly, some of the old favorite concerns, such as problems with the U.S. regional banking system and vacant office properties in central business districts, didn't resonate this year.

Regarding the Fund's outlook, the team will continue to manage conservatively adding high quality, liquid securities using our investment process built on bottom up security selection. The team will work to take advantage of bouts of volatility, adding positions when valuations are attractive. Lastly, the team continues to target a long run duration of 5.0 to 5.75 years.

financials and industrials were most disappointing, whereas healthcare served as a relative bright spot.

Stock selection within industrials has weighed on performance largely due to not owning General Electric Company and the position in RTX Corporation. Shares of RTX Corporation underperformed after news of a jet engine issue in their existing GTF lineup of aircrafts. In response, management significantly lowered guidance through 2025, and will be conducting maintenance on all impacted engines. The Fund trimmed its position given elevated near term risks. Still, we're confident in long term fundamentals because management discovered the issue as part of their internal controls and there's no expected impact on future production. Additionally, RTX Corporation's impressive balance sheet and diversified business mix comprised of defense contracts and commercial aerospace provides an attractive risk/reward profile.

Stock selection within financials also weighed on performance, though it was largely unrelated to the regional banking crisis earlier this year. Interestingly, JP Morgan Chase & Co., which the Fund can't own due to regulatory reasons, is the primary driver of relative weakness. Alternatively, stock selection in healthcare was aided by Eli Lilly and Company, a standout performer given the success and excitement around their newly launched diabetes drug (Mounjaro). Recent momentum has led the Fund to take profits given its lofty valuation; however, part of the premium valuation is justified given management's proven track record of execution and durable long term growth profile.

NXP Semiconductors N.V. and Microsoft Corporation served as the top two largest stock specific contributors for the year. We continue to have favorable views of these companies given strong fundamentals, healthy balance sheets, and savvy management execution.

The Fund continues to focus on fundamentals of the economy and company earnings. Our analysts' estimates for S&P 500 Index earnings currently project +12% for 2024 and +12% for 2025. While subject to revision, this forecast includes our best analysis of earnings expectations.

Easing inflation and improved prospects for growth have helped fuel optimism for a soft landing. However, be it the U.S. election, higher policy rates or significant geopolitical tension, risks remain that could push the economy into recession in 2024. Through the volatility, we continue to focus on high conviction stocks and take advantage of market dislocations for compelling stock selection opportunities.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/JPMorgan U.S. Value Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 9.00% for Class A shares compared to 14.34% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Value Index.

The S&P 500 Index ended 2023 strong, returning +26.29% for the year. Information technology and communication services were the best performing sectors, returning +57.84% and +55.82%, respectively. Utilities and energy were the only sectors which closed the year negative returning -7.08% and -1.33%, respectively.

This was a historically difficult year for value as a style. Over the last 25 years, only two calendar years were more challenging relative to growth: 1999 and 2020. From a stock selection standpoint, consumer discretionary,

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Lazard International Strategic Equity Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 16.51% for Class A shares compared to 18.17% for the Morningstar Developed Markets ex-North America Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

An overweight allocation to and stock selection within information technology were most additive to performance. Financials were the biggest headwind to relative results. Detractors to relative performance included AON Public Limited Company. The shares came under pressure towards the end of the year. Management announced a deal to acquire NFP Corp, which would bolster the company's presence in the middle market. The size of the transaction and expected timeline to get approval weighed on investor sentiment. A strong U.S. Dollar has been a headwind to sales and profit growth over the course of the year. In addition, the lack of capital market activity has dragged on AON Public Limited Company commercial risk division. MERCK Kommanditgesellschaft auf Aktien has faced headwinds from destocking by its biopharma customers over the course of the year, which has been prevalent across life sciences. Declining demand from COVID-19 related activities, and improved lead times in supply chains, are prompting efforts to reduce inventory levels across the industry. Performance in the semiconductor materials business has been muted due to a cyclical downturn in the industry – though it is worth noting that semiconductor stocks have been among the best performers this year. Valeo has built a good orderbook over the past 18 months, but slow progress on margin recovery has created some uncertainty about the rebound potential as auto production normalizes. These concerns have not been helped by several OEMs providing weak guidance for the fourth quarter, raising fears about the outlook for 2024.

Contributors to relative performance included Advantest Corporation. The Japanese semiconductor testing company reacted favorably to reports from NVIDIA Corporation of strong demand for leading edge chips among their hyperscale customers. Advantest Corporation is the leading provider of test equipment to high performance computing companies, like NVIDIA Corporation, and the company has started to articulate the favorable impact on their financials as this part of the business continues to grow. Renesas Electronics Corporation shares performed well after delivering a reassuring set of results over the course of the year despite fears of a cyclical downturn in auto and industrial semiconductors. The resilient performance demonstrated how the new management team have changed the business for the better. The strong order backlog, resilience of margins and better control of inventory provided confidence that the company is far better positioned to whether a potential downturn. A capital markets day in the first half outlined the medium-term opportunities for the business to continue to grow and, more importantly, continue to improve the return profile of the business. Ryanair Holdings Public Limited Company - ADR reported strong results over the course of the year. The carrier noted continued strong demand for air travel with a positive outlook for pricing. Cash flow generation is very strong, which underpins further buybacks and dividends to shareholders. The performance highlights the further improvement of Ryanair Holdings Public Limited Company's cost position relative to peers, which underpins the strong return profile of the company.

Stock selection, not sector or regional allocation, has driven the long-term track record of the Fund. At the company level, we seek a balance between financial productivity (i.e., returns on capital), valuation, and sustainability of income generation. At the same time, we look for market inefficiencies – mispriced assets, improvers, and compounders – that are empirically validated sources of alpha.

The investment team continues to meet with company management teams and has resumed traveling to meet management at their headquarters. These research trips help us build insights and perspective that are important in monitoring our investments and for generating new investment ideas. By continuing to focus on stock selection, the investment team remains confident that the strong long-term track record of the Fund has the potential to continue.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Loomis Sayles Global Growth Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 36.41% for Class A shares compared to 22.13% for the Morningstar Global Target Market Exposure Index (Net).

Meta Platforms, Inc., MercadoLibre S.R.L, and Amazon.com, Inc. were the top contributors to performance during the year. Alynlam Pharmaceuticals, Inc., Yum China Holdings, Inc., and Doximity, Inc. were the largest detractors from performance during the year. Stock selection in communication services, consumer discretionary, healthcare, and information technology as well as our allocation to communication services, consumer discretionary, consumer staples, and financials contributed positively to relative performance.

Stock selection in industrials, financials, and consumer staples as well as our allocation to healthcare and information technology detracted from relative performance. The investment process is characterized by bottom up, fundamental research and a long-term investment time horizon. The nature of the process leads to a lower turnover Fund where sector positioning is the result of stock selection. The Fund is overweight in communication services, consumer discretionary, and healthcare relative to the benchmark. The Fund is underweight in financials, information technology, consumer staples, and industrials. The Fund has no holdings in energy, materials, utilities or real estate. All aspects of the team's quality growth valuation investment thesis must be present simultaneously for the team to make an investment. During the year the Fund initiated a new position in ARM Holdings PLC. The Fund added to the existing positions in Adyen N.V., Amazon.com Inc., Block, Inc., Doximity, Inc., and Tesla Inc. as near-term price weaknesses created more attractive reward to risk opportunities. The Fund trimmed its existing position in Novo Nordisk A/S. The Fund also trimmed its existing position in Meta Platforms, Inc. as it reaches its maximum allowable position size.

("CMBS") detracted from relative performance as concerns about commercial real estate fundamentals continue to weigh on the market. Duration positioning also dragged modestly on relative performance. Specifically, a duration underweights in December slightly detracted from relative returns as rates fell.

We maintain an up in quality, up in liquidity and down in cyclical posture. Given broader macroeconomic uncertainty, we have positioned the Fund to perform well in a wide range of potential scenarios. Within IG corporates, we remain conservatively positioned in financials, overweight large U.S. money center banks and European national champion banks, which we feel are particularly attractive in the current environment. In terms of ABS, we continue to favor high quality securities within automotives, focusing on newly originated loans with superior underwriting. Although valuations are compelling, we remain cautious about certain segments of the commercial real estate market and continued to reduce the Fund's overall exposure to CMBS over the year. While our allocation to HY corporate bonds is near historic lows given our up in quality emphasis and the reduced availability of yield to call names, we continue to seek opportunities in higher quality parts of the market, such as energy, and idiosyncratic situations associated with mergers or credit events.

Derivatives were not a meaningful part of the investment strategy.

We believe the opportunity set for fixed income remains compelling. While rates rallied at the close of 2023, Treasury yields across the curve are still at some of the most elevated levels in over a decade. Higher bond yields bring higher return expectations across the board. Higher yields also equate to a more attractive risk/reward dynamic for investors, as the enhanced carry provides cushion to total returns, offering protection should rates continue to rise.

Strong fundamentals and attractive carry make the investment grade corporate segment look particularly attractive. Credit spreads have tightened, given a resilient U.S. economy and a potential U.S. Federal Reserve pivot, but overall investment grade corporate yields are near the highest levels since the Great Financial Crisis and outyield the level of HY corporates from two years ago. Balance sheets are at healthy levels, and leverage remains relatively low, as corporate America has acted prudently over the last few years. Revenues held up throughout 2023, and companies have shown the ability to pass along higher costs to maintain margins. However, we maintain a focus on companies and industries we believe are more insulated from the potential negative impact of higher yields and tighter credit conditions.

While we've observed some consumer weakening at the end of 2023, it is important to note that this is coming after multiyear fundamental consumer strength. Income levels, for example, continue to experience growth, consumer spending remains strong, and unemployment is still below 4% and modestly above the 50-year low experienced earlier in 2023. In real estate, we find compelling value in CMBS, but remain cautious due to the many headwinds. Valuations are pricing in considerable revenue and financing stress and consequently offer significantly higher spreads than other areas of the bond market. While stress is likely to increase on more vulnerable properties, we will continue to focus on high quality, liquid deals outside of the office and retail segments.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Lord Abbett Short Duration Income Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 5.38% for Class A shares compared to 5.61% for the ICE BofA 1-3 Yr U.S. Corporate Index.

The Fund seeks to deliver a high level of current income consistent with the preservation of capital by investing in a variety of short maturity debt securities including, investment grade ("IG") and high yield ("HY") corporate bonds, U.S. government securities, and mortgage and other asset-backed debt securities. Security selection within IG corporate bonds was the primary contributor to relative returns, mainly within financials.

The Fund's multi sector approach provided diversification benefits and contributed to relative performance. Most notably, allocations to asset-backed securities ("ABS") and collateralized loan obligations led to a positive impact on relative performance. The short term HY corporate allocation also contributed to relative performance as credit spreads tightened over the year. The Fund's allocation to commercial mortgage-backed securities

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Mellon Utilities Sector Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of -7.71% for Class A shares compared to -7.04% for the Morningstar U.S. Utilities Index.

The investment objective of the Fund is total return through capital appreciation and dividend income.

The Fund invests, under normal circumstances, at least 80% of its assets (net assets plus the amount of any borrowings made for investment purposes) in the stocks included in the Morningstar U.S. Utilities Sector Index ("Index") in proportion to their market capitalization weighting in the Index. The Fund may concentrate in certain industries in the utilities to the extent such industries are represented in the Index. The Index measures the performance of the utilities of the U.S. equity market. The Fund seeks to achieve its objective by utilizing a replication investment approach, called indexing, which attempts to replicate the investment performance of the Index. Indexing may eliminate the chance that the Fund will outperform the Index, but also may reduce some of the risk of active management, such as poor security selection. Indexing may offer a cost-effective investment approach to gaining sector exposure over the long-term.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/MFS Mid Cap Value Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 12.30% for Class A shares compared to 11.83% for the Morningstar U.S. Mid Cap Broad Value Index.

A combination of an underweight positioning and stock selection within utilities aided performance relative to the Morningstar US Mid Cap Broad Value index. There were no individual stocks, either in the Fund or in the benchmark, that were among the Fund's top relative contributors over the year.

The Fund's overweight position within industrials helped relative returns, led by an overweight position in freight transportation services provider XPO, Inc. and holdings of industrial manufacturer Eaton Corporation Public Limited Company.

Stock selection within consumer staples further lifted relative results. Within this sector, not owning shares of poor-performing drug store operator Walgreens Boots Alliance, Inc. benefited relative performance.

Elsewhere, holding shares of residential home building company Toll Brothers, Inc., networking chip maker Marvell Technology, Inc., apparel retailer PVH Corp., investment banking firm Evercore Inc. and footwear retailer Skechers U.S.A., Inc. bolstered relative results. Additionally, ownership in shares of semiconductor manufacturer ON Semiconductor Corporation and lifestyle and housing solutions provider Assurant, Inc. further supported relative returns.

Stock selection within consumer discretionary detracted from relative performance, led by the Fund not owning shares of homebuilders D.R. Horton, Inc., PulteGroup, Inc. and Lennar Corporation and an overweight position in food and support services provider Aramark Services, Inc.

Stock selection within financials was flat, but an overweight position within financials weakened relative results. Within this sector, the Fund's overweight positions in shares of commercial banking service provider Signature Bank and banking and financial services company SVB Financial Group dampened relative returns. Not owning strong performing technology and financial infrastructure products and services provider Coinbase Global, Inc. also detracted from relative performance.

Stocks in other sectors that held back relative returns included the Fund's overweight positions in seed and crop protection solutions company Corteva, Inc. and integrated electric power company The AES Corporation.

The Fund's cash and or cash equivalents position during the year was also a detractor from relative performance. Under normal market conditions, the Fund strives to be fully invested and generally holds cash to buy new holdings and to provide liquidity. In a year when equity markets rose, as measured by the Fund's benchmark, holding cash hurt performance versus the benchmark, which has no cash position.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Neuberger Berman Commodity Strategy Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of -5.73% for Class A shares compared to -7.91% for the Bloomberg Commodity Index.

As a reminder, the Fund's investment universe consists of exchange traded futures contracts on commodities.

After a strong 2022, commodities lagged in 2023.

Energy commodities were the worst performing commodities during the year with the Bloomberg Energy Subindex falling -21.64% as supply disruptions eased following Russia's invasion of Ukraine in 2022. Domestic U.S. production reached an all-time high, while demand continues to disappoint, particularly in China. U.S. natural gas normalized, falling over 60% after spiking in 2022. Over the year, the Fund's positioning in energy was positive from a relative perspective. Relative to the benchmark, the Fund's large underweight in natural gas was its largest contributor to outperformance and helped the Fund avoid natural gas' decline through the year.

Industrial metals were lower on the year as China's reopening post COVID-19 disappointed on the demand side. In 2023, industrial metals detracted from absolute and relative performance. Relative to the benchmark, positive performance from the Fund's underweight in aluminum was eroded by negative performance from an overweight in zinc and lead, the latter which was newly added to the benchmark in 2022.

Precious metals were higher in 2023, gold in particular, as the U.S. Dollar fell alongside rates moving lower. We view these metals as a low beta hedge, valuable amidst economic uncertainty and increasing geopolitical tensions. Precious metals positioning detracted from overall Fund performance on the year due to the Fund's underweight in gold, and out of benchmark position in palladium.

Agricultural commodities were lower in 2023. We are cautious as the world enters a period of El Niño, which usually brings disruptive weather patterns. The Fund's positioning in agriculture detracted slightly relative to the benchmark, the Fund benefited from underweights in soybeans and wheat, which was offset by overweight in corn and Kansas wheat.

Softs were the best performing commodities during the year with cocoa, sugar and coffee making up the top 3 individual commodities. We appreciate softs as they provide idiosyncratic diversification benefits. In terms of relative performance, the Fund outperformed over the quarter due to gains from an out of benchmark position in cocoa.

Finally, livestock was neutral in 2023 but was additive to the Fund. Relatively speaking, the Fund outperformed the benchmark due to an overweight in live cattle, an out of benchmark position in feeder cattle, and an underweight position in lean hogs.

As we look ahead to 2024, several key drivers are set to sculpt the commodities landscape. Anticipated rate cuts and a weakening of the U.S. Dollar, along with strategic output adjustments by OPEC, are poised to underpin commodities broadly. Energy commodities, in particular, present attractive opportunities in our view as current prices may not fully account for the underlying supply tightness.

In the metals sector, we view copper and aluminum as well positioned to capitalize on the acceleration of the energy transition. Their critical roles in green technology and infrastructure should aid performance amidst this global shift. We expect gold, traditionally a haven asset, to benefit from a decline in real interest rates, with geopolitical uncertainties lending additional support.

Agricultural markets face a potential inflection point as the looming threat of a strong El Niño event could jeopardize crop production, thereby linking the fate of global supplies to the geopolitical intricacies surrounding the Black Sea grain corridor deal.

Livestock may offer a more compelling investment. Input cost pressures are causing ranchers to hesitate in expanding herds, which could lead to supply constraints given the multidecade low in cattle inventories.

Lastly, in a year where traditional markets may experience the highs of fear of missing out during euphoric upswings, inflation sensitive commodities stand out as a prudent hedge against potential economic potholes. The year 2024 presents a complex, but opportune, tapestry for commodity investment, where we believe strategic positioning will be key to navigating this diverse and dynamic market.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Neuberger Berman Gold Plus Strategy Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 13.02% for Class A shares compared to 12.82% for the Bloomberg Gold Subindex.

As a reminder, the Fund's investment universe consists of exchange traded futures contracts that reference gold, silver, platinum, palladium, and the cryptocurrency, Bitcoin.

After a difficult 2022, global stocks and bonds delivered strong performance in 2023, defying most investor's expectations that the global tightening cycle would weigh on economic activity. Throughout the year, inflationary pressures eased, and central banks progressed from hawkish rhetoric to data dependent and ended the year by setting the stage for interest rate cuts in 2024. As investors navigated the fluid economic and investment environment, amid regional banking stress and geopolitical political tensions, corporate earnings remained resilient on the back of a well-supported consumer and labor market. The S&P 500 Index and Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index both rallied during the year, returning 26.29% and 5.53%, respectively. After a strong 2022, commodities lagged in 2023, with the Bloomberg Commodity Index retreating - 7.91% over the year.

Gold was higher for the year, buoyed by easing interest rates towards the end of the year amid investor optimism that major central banks would pivot to a more dovish monetary policy stance in 2024. Precious metals ex gold detracted amid reduced industrial demand. In 2023, the Fund's diversified exposure to Bitcoin drove the overall outperformance versus the benchmark. Over the long run we believe digital assets can provide diversification benefits to the broader precious metal's Fund.

In 2024, we are optimistic on the precious metals sector, offering a sanctuary for investors amidst economic uncertainty. Gold, the quintessential safe haven asset, may benefit against the backdrop of a dovish U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") and anticipated rate cuts, which may lead to a softer U.S. Dollar and reduced real interest rates. This prospect, combined with robust consumer demand from China and India and increased central bank purchases, suggests a sturdy price floor for gold. With the Fed guiding towards a less hawkish policy, major sell side analysts are now revising up their price estimates suggesting price risks skewed to the upside as sentiment is likely to spillover from analysts to investors. We believe this makes gold an attractive asset for those seeking stability in the face of geopolitical and recessionary risks.

Silver presents an enticing opportunity, in our view, with its industrial uses in photovoltaic and electronics manufacturing augmenting its investment appeal. The metal stands to gain from the global pivot towards renewable energy and emerging technologies like 5G.

Platinum and palladium find their strength in the drive for cleaner energy and stringent emission standards, which should bolster its industrial demand, particularly for auto catalysts. Challenges in automotive are offset by supply constraints from major producers like South Africa, suggesting a favorable price trajectory.

As for Bitcoin, 2024 is set to be a critical year, with the next halving (a pre-planned reduction of blockchain mining rewards) set to happen towards April, at block number 840,000. The anticipation of a spot Bitcoin ETF contributed to the cryptocurrency being up around 50% in the last quarter.

Together, gold's stability, silver's dual utility, platinum's environmental tailwinds and renewed interest in Bitcoin craft an attractive narrative in 2024, positioning them as strategic additions to a diversified Fund.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Neuberger Berman Strategic Income Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 9.78% for Class A shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

Throughout the year, the Fund maintained an emphasis on diversified exposure to spread sectors and maintaining positive duration.

The Fund's positioning in high yield corporate credit was the largest contributor to relative returns. Securitized credit allocations, particularly in mortgage credit, added to relative returns as well. The Fund's active duration/yield curve positioning also contributed to relative returns in 2023 as volatility in U.S. rates markets persisted. Sector allocations within investment grade credit detracted from returns on a relative basis, however security selection added to relative returns.

There were several adjustments made to the Fund during the year. The investment team was active in repositioning risk, seeking to take advantage of market opportunities. As the interest rate environment evolved throughout the year, we actively managed the Fund's duration; extending duration to as high as 5.71 years and decreasing the duration to 3.46 years to finish the year as interest rates rallied in the fourth quarter. As corporate credit spreads across investment grade and non-investment grade markets continued to compress throughout the year, we consistently decreased exposures in favor of diversified credit exposures in securitized markets. We steadily increased our exposures to agency mortgage-backed securities throughout the year, targeting a mix of higher coupon new issues, while maintaining exposures to legacy discounted positions. Agency mortgage-backed securities allocations were complemented by a diversified allocation to commercial mortgage-backed securities, asset-backed securities and mortgage credit securities.

Looking ahead, we are emphasizing security selection in high-quality securities with attractive yields and continue to tactically adjust exposures as opportunities present themselves.

The Fund selectively utilized U.S. Treasury futures, interest rate futures and interest rate swaps throughout the year to help manage the duration and curve exposure of the Fund. Derivatives positively contributed to Fund performance during the year.

The investment objective of the Fund over the year remained consistent with its prospectus objective to seek high current income with a secondary objective of long-term capital appreciation.

underweight to information technology, which drove U.S. market returns in 2023, detracted. Stock selection in communication services and consumer discretionary also detracted. Consumer discretionary was led lower by the Fund's exposure to Hasbro, Inc.

The Fund's largest overweight is financials, as it continues to be the largest absolute and relative weight in the fund due to attractive valuations and solid capital positions. Regional banks are facing some uncertainty given potential new regulations. While we cut our exposure to this segment early this year, we maintain a few positions, including the strongest franchises among the U.S. banks. In insurance we are finding strong, discipline pricing driving improving earnings trends. The capital return opportunity within the group remains highly compelling despite a more volatile economic outlook. We are also overweight energy, and our holdings are diversified across refiners as well as exploration and production companies with attractive assets.

We continue to be underweight consumer staples where we see unattractive valuations relative to earnings power and more challenges related to input cost inflation. We are also underweighting information technology.

At the start of 2023, we highlighted several elements that would likely influence investor sentiment and drive market direction and returns, including persistent inflation and tighter monetary policy. While neither was a concern in the preceding decade, they are now important variables in investment decisions. In short, we viewed 2023 as a year of transition for both companies and investors as they adjusted to "free money" no longer being free.

Looking ahead to 2024, we believe inflation and monetary policy will continue to be important considerations and would now include slowing economic growth as an additional driver of investor sentiment and returns. Our outlook is relatively cautious given the market's apparent lack of consideration for these factors, and we believe there remains much uncertainty in the direction and outcomes for each. Further, while the Fed has successfully begun lowering inflation, we believe continued intervention may be required to reach the Fed's inflation target and achieve an economic soft landing.

From an investment perspective, "balance" is a fitting word to describe our current approach to the market given this uncertainty. That does not mean we lack conviction. Instead, we consider these macro factors as we evaluate companies and determine the best potential investment outcomes, being selective in where and when to be offensive and defensive. We believe a greater emphasis and focus on solid balance sheets and liquidity should be key to achieving this balance. As always, we favor companies sitting at the nexus of robust fundamentals, attractive valuations, and catalyst-driven business momentum.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Newton Equity Income Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 10.37% for Class A shares compared to 14.34% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Value Index.

Equities reversed course from double digit losses in 2022, looking past the failures of several high profile banks in the first quarter and pinning hopes on a possible U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") pivot in interest rate policy. Slowing inflation data and continuing economic growth boosted optimism for a soft landing, leading the central bank to hit pause and begin to consider the possibility of rate cuts in 2024. Health care and utilities contributed the most to returns while communication services and consumer discretionary lagged.

Stock selection in health care was the largest driver of relative returns. In utilities, stock selection contributed, led by the position in Constellation Energy Group, Inc. An

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/PIMCO Income Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 8.51% for Class A shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

High yield and investment grade credit exposure, particularly industrials, contributed to performance. Tactical U.S. duration exposure contributed to performance as rates rose in the first three quarters of the year then rallied in fourth quarter. Holdings of non-agency mortgage-backed securities and other securitized debt contributed, as did select emerging market currency exposure.

Exposure to high yield financials detracted from performance. A short to Japanese rates and long to the Yen detracted from performance as rates fell and the currency weakened relative to the U.S. Dollar. Exposure to treasury inflation protected securities detracted from performance.

Derivatives were used in the Fund and are instrumental in attaining specific exposures targeted to gain from anticipated market developments. The Fund's duration positioning was partly facilitated through interest rate swaps, options, and futures. The Fund's overall corporate exposure was partially obtained via credit default swaps. The Fund's currency positioning was partly achieved through currency forward agreements.

The primary investment objective of the Fund is to maximize current income. Long term capital appreciation is a secondary objective.

The banking crisis took center stage in the first quarter. Instability in the financial sector and broadly cooling inflation led investors to revise their expectations for central bank rate hikes. The U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") delivered two 25 basis point ("bps") hikes over the quarter. In the second quarter, signs of easing inflation prompted the Fed to offer dovish rhetoric; however, resilient growth and a swift resolution of stresses within the banking sector caused the Fed to signal at least two additional rate hikes. Resilient growth in the third quarter caused real yields on U.S. 10-year Treasuries to climb to over 2% - the highest level since the Great Financial Crisis. The Fed hiked its policy rate once (+25 bps) before pausing in September, then signaling that they expect to hike once more before yearend. Cooling macroeconomic data with the Fed's dovish pivot in the fourth quarter caused yields on 10-year U.S. Treasuries to fall 69 bps. There was no additional rate hike.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/PIMCO Investment Grade Credit Bond Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 7.73% for Class A shares compared to 8.18% for the Bloomberg U.S. Credit Index.

Tactical exposure to U.S. interest rates contributed to performance as rates rose in the first three quarters then rallied in the fourth quarter. Agencies as well as name selection within utilities also contributed. Name selection in financials, particularly exposure to Credit Suisse AG, detracted from performance. Emerging market bonds, particularly legacy positions in Russia, detracted from performance, as did securitized debt.

During the year, the Fund bought and sold credit protection through credit default swaps and swaptions to manage exposure to the credit risk of the broader investment grade sector. Underweight to credit spread was a detractor for performance. The Fund's overall duration positioning, which was positive for returns, was partly facilitated with interest rate swaps, options, and futures. The Fund traded foreign currency contracts to hedge the currency exposure associated with some or all the Fund's securities, or as part of a tactical investment strategy.

The investment objective of the Fund is to seek maximum total return, consistent with preservation of capital and prudent investment management.

The banking crisis took center stage in the first quarter. Instability in financials and broadly cooling inflation led investors to revise their expectations for central bank rate hikes. Tactical U.S. duration positioning, particularly a fourth quarter overweight to the belly of the curve as rates rallied, contributed to performance. Exposure to Eurozone duration contributed to performance. Off benchmark exposure to non-agency mortgage-backed securities contributed to performance as spreads tightened. Exposure to Japanese breakeven inflation (the difference between nominal and real yields) added to performance as the real yield curve in Japan shifted down.

A short to Japanese nominal rates detracted from performance as rates fell.

Derivatives were instrumental in attaining exposures targeted to gain from anticipated market developments. The fund utilized interest rate swaps to implement inflationary views, which were neutral for performance. The Fund's U.S. and Eurozone interest rates, which were positive for returns, were partly facilitated using interest rate swaps, options, and futures, and the fund's Japanese rate exposure, partially facilitated through interest rate swaps, was negative for performance.

The investment objective of the Fund is to seek maximum real return, consistent with preservation of real capital and prudent investment management.

The Fund consists of two strategies managed by Sub-Advisers. Each Sub-Adviser may use different investment strategies in managing the Fund, acts independently from the others and uses its own methodology. The Adviser ("JNAM") is responsible for selecting the Fund's investment strategies and for determining the Fund assets allocated to each Sub-Adviser.

PPM America, Inc. ("PPM")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to PPM was 70.97%.

Positive security selection across several sectors drove the outperformance, led by media & entertainment and technology, hardware & equipment. Security selection in consumer durables & apparel and an overweight to telecommunication services modestly detracted. Exchange traded funds and derivative positioning had no material impact.

The investment objective of the strategy is to seek to provide a high level of current income. We seek to add value over the long term primarily through security selection. The strategy actively invests primarily in income producing floating rate instruments and uses a credit intensive fundamental investment process. The strategy may also invest in high yield bonds and other asset classes. Quantitative and qualitative factors, such as economic and market factors, are considered in terms of how they could impact an individual company or a specific sector.

Relative to the benchmark on December 31, 2023, the strategy's largest overweight sectors were: materials; food, beverage & tobacco; and consumer discretionary distribution & retail. We added to the overweight in materials and consumer discretionary distribution & retail during the year. In terms of underweight sectors, software & services was the largest underweight relative to the benchmark at yearend, followed by capital goods and financial services. We added to the underweight in capital goods during the year and moved health care equipment & services from an overweight to an underweight. Approximately 6.24% of the strategy was comprised of high yield bonds on December 31, 2023, slightly higher than the level a year ago. Bonds provide opportunity to selectively add liquidity and convexity while managing duration.

In our opinion, the primary risk for floating rate loans in 2024 is a more pronounced turn in the credit cycle, in particular a spike in defaults that pushes them well above historical averages.

FIAM LLC ("Fidelity")

At December 31, 2023, the Fund's allocation to Fidelity was 29.03%.

Performance was driven by a response to moderating inflation, resilient growth, and prospects for earlier and more aggressive U.S. Federal Reserve easing in 2024.

Security selection in all telecom and insurance contributed the most to relative performance over the year, while holdings in the electronics/electrical and leisure goods/activities/movies detracted from relative performance.

In all telecom, the position in residential home internet services provider CenturyLink, Inc. contributed to relative performance. In insurance, the position in insurance provider Asurion LLC contributed to relative performance. Among individual names, the overweight position in private brand food products distributor 8th Avenue Food & Provisions, Inc. contributed to relative performance.

In electronics/electrical not owning full service information technology company Vision Solutions, Inc. detracted from relative performance. Among names in leisure goods/activities/movies, not owning movie theater operator AMC Entertainment Holdings, Inc. detracted from relative performance. Among individual names, the overweight position in franchising platform operator Franchise Group Intermediate Holdco, LLC detracted from relative performance.

Security selection in financial services was the largest non-cash detractor. Security selection in basic industry and consumer goods also detracted. Conversely, security selection in capital goods, leisure and telecommunications positively contributed. Derivative positioning did not materially impact Fund performance.

The investment objective of the Fund is to maximize current income. As a secondary objective, the Fund seeks capital appreciation. The Fund seeks to add value over the long term primarily through security and sector selection. The Fund primarily invests in high yield, high risk debt securities and related investments using a credit research intensive investment process. The Fund also may purchase positions in floating rate bank loans, equities, and foreign securities.

During 2023, the Fund increased exposure to automotive and telecommunications and reduced exposure to retail and technology & electronics. Relative to the benchmark on December 31, 2023, the Fund's largest overweight positions were in energy and automotive. The largest underweight positions on December 31, 2023, were in real estate and basic industry. Bank loan exposure essentially remained unchanged.

In our opinion, the primary risk for high yield bonds in 2024 is a more pronounced turn in the credit cycle, in particular a spike in defaults that pushes them well above historical averages.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/PPM America Total Return Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 6.67% for Class A shares compared to 5.53% for the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

An overweight to investment grade corporate bonds positively contributed and drove the outperformance, given spread tightening. An overweight to asset-backed securities ("ABS") modestly detracted.

The investment objective of the Fund is to seek to realize maximum total return, consistent with the preservation of capital and prudent investment management. It primarily invests in a diversified portfolio of fixed income investments of U.S. and foreign issuers. The Fund invests in investment grade bonds across a broad range of sectors, including Treasury bonds, federal agency debt, corporate bonds, mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") and ABS. The Fund may also purchase high yield bonds on a tactical and strategic basis. Quantitative and qualitative factors, such as economic and market factors, are considered in terms of how they could impact an individual company or a specific sector.

Relative to the benchmark on December 31, 2023, the Fund held an underweight position in U.S. Treasuries, overweight positions in investment grade corporate bonds and ABS, an equal weight position in MBS, and an out of Index position in high yield corporate bonds. Year over year, we moved MBS from underweight to equal weight and increased the underweight to Treasuries. MBS spreads moved wider during the 2023 banking crisis, improving the value proposition, and creating an opportunity for us to move from underweight to equal weight.

In our opinion, primary risks to the market in 2024 are low conviction, slowing global economic growth and a significant increase in Treasury net supply. Market strategists enter the year with a wide dispersion on what can happen to the U.S. economy, which could lead to continued volatility and the need for managers to be agile. A record amount of Treasury net supply could impact technical in other investment grade markets.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on the Fund's performance during the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/T. Rowe Price Balanced Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 17.39% for Class A shares compared to 13.22% for the Morningstar Moderate Target Risk Index. The Fund outperformed its blended benchmark return of 17.18% for the 45% S&P 500, 20% Morningstar Developed Markets ex-North America Target Market Exposure Index (Net), 35% Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

Security selection within U.S. large cap growth stocks was a leading contributor to relative results for the year, followed by U.S. large cap core stocks. Conversely, selection within large cap value names held back relative returns. The inclusion of diversifying sectors had a negative impact on relative returns and, particularly, diversifying exposure to real assets detracted. However, out of benchmark exposure to high yield bonds added value. Tactical allocation decisions moderately contributed to relative returns for the year. Favoring high-yield bonds relative to higher quality bonds proved beneficial.

Major U.S. stock indexes produced strong gains in 2023. Equity markets rebounded from poor performance in 2022 thanks in part to generally favorable corporate earnings, a resilient economy, and increased investor interest in artificial intelligence. The market generated positive returns despite regional banking turmoil in March following the failures of Silicon Valley Bank and Signature Bank, and an increase in volatility coinciding with Israel's response to deadly Hamas attacks in early October. Arguably the most significant factor affecting the U.S. economy and the financial markets throughout the year was rising interest rates in response to elevated inflation. In the fourth quarter of the year, however, equities rallied, lifting several indexes to their highest levels in about two years. Japan's highly stimulative monetary policy helped it to lead the region in gains. Hong Kong, on the other hand, had a double digit decline, hindered in part by the decline in Chinese shares. China's sluggish economic movement was hindered in part by ongoing distress in its real estate sector. U.S. fixed income securities saw gains at the close of the year. High-yield bonds, which are less sensitive to interest rate movements and more sensitive to credit related trends, strongly outperformed higher quality bonds. Bonds in developed markets outside the U.S. also produced strong gains in 2023 in U.S. dollar terms, aided by a weaker dollar versus major European currencies. Emerging markets bonds produced strong returns in dollar terms in 2023 as most emerging markets currencies strengthened versus the greenback.

As of December 31, 2023, the Fund held interest rate futures and rights generating gross exposure of approximately 1.7%. The estimated return impact from employing futures was -4 basis points and a negligible return impact from rights for the year.

We have seen growing optimism for an engineered soft landing for the U.S. economy. Indeed, after more than a year and a half of unprecedented tightening from global central banks, the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") signaled a long awaited pivot in monetary policy in late December. While central banks in Europe and other major developed regions did not immediately follow suit with the Fed's dovish rhetoric, expectations that rates could fall faster and sooner than previously anticipated have mounted as 2023 draws to a close. A pivot toward looser monetary policy could certainly represent a tailwind for growth, but risks remain, particularly if further economic data suggesting stickier inflation prompt a more cautious approach that disappoints market hopes. Divergent approaches to monetary policy present an additional concern, as inflation remains elevated in Europe giving the European Central Bank cause for caution and the Bank of Japan has only recently begun to contemplate incremental tightening. With the path for monetary policy and economic growth still uncertain, we expect volatility to continue as markets look for clarity in the near-term forecast. Key risks to global markets include a deeper than expected decline in growth, central bank missteps, a reacceleration in inflation, the trajectory of Chinese growth, and geopolitical tensions. While we elected to add to risk assets during the year, we continue to evaluate long-term valuations and early indications of stabilization or improvement in macroeconomic conditions as we assess compelling opportunities and potential risks in the year ahead.

have subsided and expectations have increased for the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") to cut rates in 2024. While less restrictive monetary policy would likely be a boon for markets, the recent rally has left valuations vulnerable to a pullback and still elevated interest rates could pose a headwind to economic growth. At current levels, we have a relatively conservative outlook for markets and have positioned the Fund accordingly. A year ago, market expectations were heavily tilted toward a Fed induced recession, and we positioned the Fund with an overweight to equities, reflecting our view that a severe recession was unlikely. A year later, as optimism fueled a risk on rally that brought major indexes near record levels and the potential upside in stocks waned, we have taken a more cautious approach. We remain focused on corporate fundamentals and identifying opportunities to invest that we think can add value over the long term, while also paring positions where valuations appear extended. As a result, our effective exposure to equities decreased over the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/T. Rowe Price Established Growth Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 48.03% for Class A shares compared to 40.25% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Growth Index.

Overall, stock selection drove relative outperformance, but sector weighting also contributed. Within the Fund, communication services contributed the most to relative results as favorable stock choices drove relative sector strength (Meta Platforms, Inc., Spotify Technologies S.A.). Information technology also assisted relative performance due to beneficial security selection (NVIDIA Corporation). No sectors detracted from relative performance during the year.

The five largest purchases during the year were Meta Platforms, Inc., Tesla Inc., Adobe Inc., T-Mobile USA, Inc., and Chubb Limited.

The five largest sales during the year were Microsoft Corporation, Ross Stores, Inc., ASML Holding N.V., Intuit Inc., and Advanced Micro Devices, Inc.

At the sector level, the largest increases in absolute weighting during the year were in financials and communication services. The most significant decreases were in information technology and consumer discretionary. The sector weightings are residual of the bottom up stock selection process and typically reflect where the Fund manager is finding compelling growth opportunities at the individual company level rather than through a broader thematic approach.

Continued trends in disinflation, alongside a handful of benign jobs reports, have widened the runway for a soft landing. The U.S. Federal Reserve's dovish pivot, and implied rate cut cadence, has encouraged risk on behavior as the probability of a recession continues to decline. We believe equity returns are likely to be more subdued in 2024; an additional move higher will likely hinge on the ability of companies to demonstrate meaningful earnings and free cash flow growth following the significant move up in the last 12 months, which was aided in large part by multiple expansion. From a positioning standpoint, the Fund continues to refrain from taking a pronounced stance on macroeconomic implications, and instead, is aiming for a balanced approach of offensive ideas that can thrive if the skies continue to clear, as well as defensive positions that can provide downside support. Similarly, predicting election outcomes and subsequent market impacts is not an area of focus at this stage; however, as political agendas come into focus and the balance of political power crystalizes, actionable idiosyncratic investment opportunities may present themselves.

Finally, although permitted in accordance with portfolio guidelines, derivative instruments are not used in the management of the Fund.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/T. Rowe Price Mid-Cap Growth Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 19.96% for Class A shares compared to 20.84% for the Morningstar U.S. Mid Cap Broad Growth Index.

At the overall level, stock selection was responsible for excess returns. Financials contributed to relative results, primarily due to stock choices, but an underweight allocation also proved beneficial. Shares of FS KKR Capital Corp., a leading diversified global investment firm, advanced following solid quarterly results reflecting growth in fundraising and strong insurance earnings. An update from the firm toward year end, announcing the acquisition of the remaining stake in Global Atlantic Financial Company as well as other strategic initiatives, was well received by investors. We believe that the company has a favorable growth profile and a clear opportunity for multiple expansion. Fleetcor Technologies, Inc. operates multiple business lines including fuel cards, corporate payments, tolls, lodging, and gift cards. Shares advanced through much of the year on solid results driven by strong execution despite challenging conditions including secular pressure on its core fleet business. Strategic efforts to optimize the Fund, including the sale of its Russian assets, were well received by investors.

An underweight allocation to real estate boosted relative results.

Stock selection in consumer discretionary added value. Shares of Chipotle Mexican Grill, Inc. performed well amid a challenged backdrop with a deceleration in consumer spending. The company posted three consecutive quarters of above consensus results aided by process and staffing improvements, technology initiatives, and better expense management. Strength in travel, with most major regions returning to 2019 levels or above, lifted shares of Hilton Worldwide Holdings Inc., the second largest global hotel brand. Hilton is attractive for its low capital costs and significant exposure to the growing business and group travel segments.

Conversely, a significant overweight exposure to health care, one of the lowest performing sectors for the benchmark, detracted the most from relative performance.

Industrials and business services also hindered relative results due to both stock choices and an underweight allocation. Shares of Southwest Airlines Co., the largest domestic passenger air carrier in the U.S., declined as the company struggled to keep up with industry fares, leading investors to question the resiliency of the company's business model.

The top purchases for the year were Biogen inc., EQT AB, Yum! Brands, Inc., TechnipFMC PLC, and Tyler Technologies, Inc. The top sales for the year were Synopsys, Inc., Fortinet, Inc., Ingersoll Rand Inc., KLA Corporation, and MGM Resorts International.

The Fund does not typically use derivative securities in the management of the strategy. Current market conditions do not expose the Fund to a particular or significant risk, in our view. During the year ended December 31, 2023, the Fund did not hold derivatives.

asset-backed securities ("ABS") contributed. Interest rate sensitive RMBS benefited from the late period rate rally, and shorter duration ABS performed well during periods of rising rates. An overweight to investment grade corporate bonds and a corresponding underweight to U.S. Treasuries helped relative performance amid periods of limited new supply, some encouraging corporate earnings reports, and a late period improvement in risk sentiment. Security selection within investment grade corporates also contributed. Conversely, interest rate management detracted, dragged lower by a modestly longer than benchmark average duration positioning as markets realized an additional 100 basis points ("bps") of tightening during the first half of the year with the U.S. Federal Reserve ("Fed") steadfast in its campaign to combat stubbornly high inflation. However, yield curve positioning across key rates aided relative performance as holdings of longer maturities were beneficial amid volatility in front end rates.

As of December 31, 2023, the Fund held interest rate futures and credit default swaps generating gross exposure of approximately 32.99%. The estimated return impact from employing futures was -27 bps and -5 bps from swaps for the year.

As PCE inflation continued to decelerate and U.S. growth remained resilient, markets began to price a goldilocks scenario with a possibility that the Fed could achieve a soft landing. Against this backdrop, front end rates have likely seen a peak for this cycle, but we believe we are well positioned to capitalize on elevated yield opportunities with rate inversion still persistent across the curve. While rate and spread volatility could persist alongside evolving rate cut forecasts and timing, we agree that cuts are the most logical next step should macroeconomic data continue to cool. However, we acknowledge that the path to sustainable lower inflation could get bumpier if the trend of economic data deviates from current market expectations. Using the breadth and depth of our global research platform, we will look to selectively add to high conviction positions as volatility creates attractive entry points.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/T. Rowe Price U.S. High Yield Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 13.65% for Class A shares compared to 13.47% for the ICE Bank of America U.S. High Yield Constrained Index.

The Fund's top relative performance contributors on an industry basis were consumer goods, health care, and energy. From a credit ratings perspective, the positioning across the ratings spectrum contributed to performance. The underweight to BBs and overweight to CCCs contributed to relative results during the strong recovery year for risk assets following a difficult 2022. Security selection, particularly within BBs, also contributed to the strong performance. The Fund's weakest industry results were in services, technology and electronics, and capital goods. The allocation to reserves, which is necessary for Fund liquidity, weighed on relative results in the strong performance environment over the year.

We continued to increase the Fund's overall quality over the past year—reducing our overweight to CCCs and our underweight to BBs—and we continue to look for opportunities to do so at the margin. Unlike the low coupon

COVID-19 era bonds that are available in the secondary market, we recently found some compelling opportunities in select BBs with favorable bond structures and attractive coupons via the new issue market. The largest industry overweight are currently in financial services, energy, and consumer goods. Within energy, we are biased toward midstream (gas distribution), which offers limited commodity exposure as operating margins are fee based, providing a stable earnings profile. We will likely endeavor to reduce our overweight to energy as we move into 2024 as out of sector opportunities present themselves. Currently our largest industry underweights are in health care, media and technology, and electronics, reflecting our view that these sectors generally provide minimum value relative to other market segments. Our health care underweight, for example, is not a macro call but rather driven by views of individual credits. Many of the industry's higher quality names trade tight and offer very low current yields, which we find unattractive.

Given the high yield asset class's strong double digit recovery that we saw in 2023, we expect 2024 to be more of an income type return year. That said, the income opportunity in high yield continues to look attractive as the U.S. Federal Reserve's rate hiking campaign pumped yield back into fixed income markets. Though off recent highs, the yield to worst on our index still ended the year at ~7.5%–8%, which is attractive relative to the last decade. We believe high yield bonds can offer a compelling alternative to equities in today's environment. At current levels, spreads look a bit tight, and we would expect them to widen somewhat from here. However, we believe that a strong income cushion and the potential for a continued decline in U.S. Treasury yields in 2024 should offset the impact of widening spreads, and we remain constructive on the asset class overall.

While defaults remain below their historical average, they have risen over the past year. We expect defaults to continue trending higher in this continued slow-burn credit cycle as more companies feel the impact of higher rates. That said, we anticipate a mean reversion toward long term averages rather than a major spike in defaults.

While 2025–2027 maturity walls have been a focus in our market over the past year, more accommodative capital market conditions in recent months have spurred a fresh wave of refinancing activity, which has enabled companies to start chipping away at these maturities. We believe this trend will continue and are therefore less concerned about these maturity walls heading into 2024 though we continue to monitor this as we review individual credits. Slowing growth and the impact of higher rates could lead to increased performance dispersion, which should create opportunities for active managers like us.

The Fund did not hold derivatives during the year.

We continue to view high yield as a strategic long term investment and a mainstay allocation in a diversified Fund. History has demonstrated that much of the asset class's long term value can be realized simply by staying invested and taking advantage of the compounding effect of regular coupon payments. Credit selection remains the cornerstone of our investment process and Fund construction. We expect it to remain the primary driver of alpha in the year ahead as it has been for us over the long term. Opportunities still exist in names that can adapt to a higher-cost regime and have levers to manage through the ongoing slow-burn credit cycle.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/T. Rowe Price Value Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 11.91% for Class A shares compared to 14.34% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Value Index.

Communication services was the leading detractor from relative performance due to an underweight allocation and adverse stock selection (Meta Platforms, Inc.). Consumer discretionary also weighed on relative returns owing to an underweight allocation and stock choices (Amazon.com, Inc.). On a positive note, industrials and business services were the leading contributors to relative results thanks to favorable stock selection (General Electronic Company).

The five largest purchases during the year were NextEra Energy, Inc., Halliburton Company, Kenvue Inc., EQT Corporation, and ConocoPhillips. The five largest sales during the year were Alphabet Inc., Becton, Dickinson and Company, The Southern Company, Broadcom Inc., and Eaton Corporation Public Limited Company.

At the sector level, the most significant decrease in weighting relative to the benchmark was in health care. The largest increase in relative weighting was in energy. The sector weightings are residual of the bottom-up stock selection process and typically reflect where the Fund manager is finding compelling valuation opportunities at the individual company level rather than through a broader thematic approach.

The market generated strong returns over the course of 2023, and the Fund saw high beta names get a strong bid during the fourth quarter. Given the concentrated nature of the market over the previous year, and the strong performance of growth stocks relative to value names, valuation may be a more important component of market returns from here on. Further, the recent strength of higher beta stocks has left behind more defensive holdings, presenting an opportunity to lean into those names, which we believe will help support the Fund over time. Moving forward, our aim is to further emphasize secular fundamental insights and quality. Overall, we are focused on finding high-quality companies with attractive fundamentals and valuations. We believe this balanced approach should lead to a Fund that has the potential to serve our clients well in a variety of market environments.

compared to -10.54% for the Morningstar China Index (Net).

Attribution analysis reveals that most of the Fund's underperformance can be attributed to stock selection.

From a sector allocation perspective, consumer discretionary (underweight) was the largest positive contributor to the relative performance, followed by health care (overweight). On the other hand, energy (no weight) detracted from the relative performance, as did financials (underweight) and industrials (overweight).

Looking at stock selection, industrials (Airtac International Group, NARI Technology Co., Ltd., Techtronic Industries Company Limited) was the best performing sector relative to the predictability in the regulatory environment. Several high profile transactions, including Horizon Pharmaceuticals/Amgen Inc., Activision/Microsoft Corporation, and VMware, Inc./Broadcom Inc., were completed despite initial regulatory pushback, boosting confidence in the market. This positive development paved the way for a solid second half of the year, with M&A volume reaching over $1.7 trillion, out of the total global value of $3.1 trillion for the entirety of 2023.

In addition, structural transactions such as spinoffs and divestitures have risen since 2020. Such restructuring activities were fueled by a focus on operational excellence, efficiency, and balance sheet optimization. Corporate separations offer several advantages, the most notable being the potential M&A opportunities that often follow from the new entities. When a business unit is separated from the larger corporation, it becomes more focused, flexible, and capable of structuring its own deals. This newfound independence and specialization make a separate entity attractive to strategic partners or buyers with a specific interest in those business units. As a result, the increase in corporate separations over the past three years has led to a surge in M&A transactions. In 2023, such transactions constituted a significant portion of deal volume, accounting for approximately 33% in the U.S. alone. This represents the highest share in almost a decade.

While macro factors influence the Fund, the investment returns are almost exclusively driven by corporate events, with the goal of providing performance that is minimally correlated with equity and fixed income indices in all market environments. The top contributors were SPACs (+1.53%), Activision Blizzard, Inc./Microsoft Corporation (+0.62%), and Seagen Inc/Pfizer Inc. (+0.53%). During this year, the most significant losers were First Horizon Corporation/ The Toronto-Dominion Bank (-2.50%), Silicon Motion, Inc./MaxLinear, Inc. (-0.68%), Euronav/Frontline PLC (-0.30%).

Looking ahead to 2024, we are optimistic about the continued increase in merger activity. The biggest challenge to M&A is uncertainty, but with more clarity in the regulatory environment and a positive track record of wins in the courtroom, strategic players are expected to ramp up their acquisition activity both here and abroad. Additionally, as the economic outlook stabilizes, the mismatch in price expectations between buyers and sellers will likely narrow, and the $1.8 trillion in cash on corporate balance sheets provides ample buyer power. Moreover, private equity sponsors face pressure to monetize their assets, with a record $1.5 trillion in dry powder in North America alone, and the catalysts for activism will continue to persist. With a more predictable cost of capital and ongoing pressure to look for growth opportunities to keep up with the speed of innovation across all industry groups, we anticipate an increase in corporate activity in 2024, a trend we have already begun to see in the first few weeks of the new year.

Westchester employs a merger arbitrage strategy that invests in common stock, preferred stock, corporate debt, derivatives, total return swaps and contracts for differences. Derivatives had a positive impact on Fund performance during the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/Westchester Capital Event Driven Fund outperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 6.46% for Class A shares compared to 2.18% for the Wilshire Liquid Alternative Event Driven Index.

Looking at the year, 2023 presented a mixed picture of the mergers & acquisitions ("M&A") landscape, especially considering the challenges faced in the previous year. Given the difficult conditions in 2022, it was no surprise that merger activity began in a subdued manner. Rising rates, increased financing costs (particularly relevant to private equity deals), ongoing geopolitical tensions, and a potential banking crisis in the first quarter contributed to a more cautious approach by company boards toward corporate reorganizations, particularly in the first half of the year.

However, as the year progressed, CEO confidence improved noticeably. This positive shift was aided by greater transparency and

The Fund seeks to maximize total return through income and capital appreciation. This is achieved through diversification across global government, investment grade corporate bonds, high yield and U.S. bank loans, emerging market bonds and currencies.

Global bond yields rose sharply during the latter part of 2022 and into 2023. As a result, the Fund benefitted extensively from the higher income earned by holding global fixed income assets. Global government bond yields were largely unchanged over the year. Developed market duration exposure had a minimal impact on returns.

Risk appetite improved markedly over the year as the macroeconomic backdrop proved more supportive. Inflation moderated and risks of a so called "hard landing" waned. As a result, spread sectors outperformed as yields broadly fell and spreads narrowed. Exposure to investment grade and high-yield corporate bonds, and to bank loans contributed strongly to returns. Emerging market bond exposure, via both local currency and hard currency bonds, were also a positive factor as yields moved lower during the year.

The U.S. Dollar was volatile, but broadly weaker during 2023. FX positioning was an overall contributor to performance during the year. Exposures to select emerging market currencies such as Mexican Peso, Brazilian Real and the Polish Zloty were positive. An exposure to the Japanese Yen detracted. The Fund employs derivatives to manage the Fund's duration/curve and currency positioning as well as manage risk. U.S., U.K., and German government bond futures were used to manage duration/curve positioning and contributed to returns. Currency forwards and options were utilized to manage currency positioning and risk, but specifically were negative.

The Fund is a focused, bottom-up portfolio of leading companies, seeking long term capital appreciation by investing in foreign companies with above average returns on equity, strong balance sheets and consistent, above average earnings growth.

From a sector perspective, information technology ("IT") was a key detractor. Failure to keep pace with the robust returns within IT was due primarily to Samsung SDI Co., Ltd. Samsung SDI Co., Ltd. is a South Korea based electric vehicle battery manufacturer. Over the last several years, the growth in electric vehicles has beaten most estimates, particularly in China, but we may be in a slower pocket of growth that could last anywhere from one to three years in our view, and this weighed on the stock. We do not think the slowdown is fully reflected in current estimates for Samsung SDI Co., Ltd. and exited the position.

From a regional perspective, China weighed on relative results. Following the abandonment of zero COVID-19 policy in China late last year, our belief was that China would see a resurgence in domestic consumer spend, similar to what other countries experienced in the post COVID-19 environment. As such, our exposure within China was exposed to domestic consumption in companies such as Alibaba Group Holding Limited, Kweichow Moutai Co., Ltd., and China Tourism Group Duty Free Corporation Limited. However, this consumption story did not play out as anticipated, and selection effect was negatively impacted.

Partially mitigating these negative effects was strong stock selection in consumer discretionary and materials. Consumer discretionary was led by the leading e-commerce platform in Latin America, MercadoLibre S.R.L. MercadoLibre S.R.L. offers a best in class ecosystem of services such as logistics and payments, allowing the company to exploit attractive growth opportunities of the large and underpenetrated total addressable market. Results this year were better than expected, with revenue growth accelerating and margins expanding.

Positive selection in materials came from Shin-Etsu Chemical Co., Ltd. Shin-Etsu Chemical Co., Ltd. has two core business PVC production and semiconductor wafer manufacturing. PVC is a widely used material, but the bulk of demand is for housing/construction related products such as white PVC pipes seen in home improvement stores. Semiconductor wafers are the base ingredient for computers chips. Shin-Etsu Chemical Co., Ltd. has a clear scale advantage across its business units, giving it a superior cost advantage relative to its competitors. Manufacturing expertise is its other competitive advantage, with both skill and efficiency leading to overall better products and better corporate results.

The Fund underperformed its blended benchmark return of 18.72% for the 65% S&P 500 Index, 35% Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Index.

The equity sleeve underperformed the S&P 500 Index during the year. Security selection was the primary driver of relative underperformance over the year. Security selection within information technology, consumer discretionary, and materials were the top detractors while stronger selection within communication services, energy, and real estate partially offset those effects. Sector allocation also detracted from relative returns. The underweight exposure to information technology, as well as the overweight to health care and energy, were top detractors. In contrast, the overweight exposure to consumer discretionary, along with the underweight exposures to financials and real estate, contributed to results.

Top detractors from relative performance within the equity sleeve included not owning NVIDIA Corporation and overweight positions to The Charles Schwab Corporation and Pfizer Inc. Top contributors within the equity sleeve included an overweight position to Meta Platforms, Inc., and underweights positions to Exxon Mobil Corporation, and Johnson & Johnson.

Over the course of the year, the sleeve initiated new positions in Uber Technologies, Inc., (industrials), Pernod Richard (consumer staples), Merck & Co., Inc (health care), and 13 other businesses.

The fixed income sleeve posted positive total returns and outperformed the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index. Security selection within investment grade credit was the primary contributor to relative returns. Selection within industrials (consumer cyclical issuers) and financials (banking issuers) had a positive impact on relative returns. An overweight to financial institutions and utilities had a positive impact while an underweight to industrials detracted. In non-corporate credit, an overweight to and security selection within taxable municipals contributed to relative returns. An underweight to and security selection within agency mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") contributed to relative returns. Within other securitized sectors, security selection within and an overweight to asset-backed securities ("ABS"), security selection within commercial MBS, as well as an out of benchmark allocation to non-agency

MBS had a positive impact. The sleeve's duration and yield curve positioning had a positive impact on relative performance. An underweight to U.S. agencies detracted slightly from relative returns.

The sleeve maintains a very modestly procyclical stance as markets enjoyed a substantial boost in the latter part of 2023 on the back of receding inflation data and dovish pivots from global central banks that drove a full embrace of goldilocks. Current levels of interest rates provide cushion to fixed income performance even if inflation remains above target, though the inversion of the curve is a headwind for longer duration assets. Additionally, we believe security selection can aid benchmark relative outperformance going forward as growth continues to slow, driving increased dispersion across sectors and within investment grade credit. Investment grade credit fundamentals remain strong but have peaked and have shown some deterioration both in leverage and interest coverage. The fixed income sleeve is currently underweight duration relative to the benchmark and maintains an underweight position in investment grade credit. Within investment grade we see the greatest opportunity in intermediate maturities and in utilities. Within securitized, the sleeve is overweight agency MBS and ABS and moderately underweight commercial MBS while continuing to hold exposure to non-agency MBS.

The fixed income sleeve made modest use of bond futures and credit index derivatives for hedging purposes; these instruments did not have a meaningful impact on performance.

Composition as of December 31, 2023:

Real Estate	91.0%
Consumer Discretionary	6.3
Industrials	1.7
Other Short Term Investments	0.6

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/WMC Global Real Estate Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 9.46% for Class A shares compared to 9.67% for the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed Index (Net).

Security selection contributed to relative performance while sector allocation detracted. Strong selection in warehouse/logistics, healthcare real estate, and office contributed to relative returns, but these effects were partially offset by weak selection in real estate technology, diversified, and retail malls. Sector allocation, a result of our fundamental bottom-up process, detracted from relative results. The Fund's overweight allocations to retail shopping centers and home builders, and underweight allocation to self storage facilities detracted from relative performance while an overweight to real estate technology and underweight allocations to office and specialty finance partially offset results.

Top contributors to relative performance were an overweight to TAG Immobilien AG (multifamily) and out of benchmark positions to Goodman Group (warehouse/logistics) and Iron Mountain Incorporated (real estate technology). Top detractors from relative performance included underweight positions in Simon Property Group, Inc. (retail-malls), Digital Realty Trust, Inc. (real estate technology), and positioning in AvalonBay Communities, Inc. (multifamily).

The largest purchases during the year included new positions in Extra Space Storage Inc. (self-storage facilities), American Homes 4 Rent, (multifamily), and Essex Property Trust, Inc. (multifamily). The largest sales were Equity Residential (multifamily), WP Carey (specialty finance), and Sun Communities, Inc. (multifamily).

The Fund's largest overweight at the end of the year was in the home builder sector. During the year, the Fund most notably increased its active weight in the warehouse/logistics, multifamily, and home builder sectors and reduced active weight in the specialty finance, retail-shopping centers, and diversified sectors. The Fund's largest underweight was specialty finance at the end of the year.

Derivatives did not have a meaningful impact on Fund performance during the year.

For the year ended December 31, 2023, JNL/WMC Value Fund underperformed its primary benchmark by posting a return of 9.21% for Class A shares compared to 14.34% for the Morningstar U.S. Large-Mid Cap Broad Value Index.

Stock selection drove relative underperformance over the year. Weak selection within information technology, industrials, and communication services was partially offset by stronger selection in energy, real estate, and financials. Sector allocation, a result of the bottom up stock selection strategy, also detracted from relative results, due primarily to underweight exposure to communication services and overweight exposure to health care. This was partially offset by underweight exposure to consumer staples and overweight exposure to information technology, which contributed.

Top detractors from relative performance during the year included not holding benchmark constituent Meta Platforms, Inc. (communication services), an overweight position in Pfizer Inc. (health care), as well as not holding benchmark constituent Amazon.com, Inc. (consumer discretionary). Top relative contributors to performance during the year included out of benchmark positions in Ares Management Corporation (financials) and Eli Lilly and Company (health care), as well as not holding benchmark constituent Exxon Mobil Corporation (energy).

The largest purchases during the year included Johnson & Johnson (health care), United Parcel Service, Inc. (industrials), and New York Community Bancorp, Inc. (financials). The largest sells during the year included eliminating the Fund's position in Eli Lilly and Company (health care), trimming the position in Alphabet Inc. The Fund's largest overweight at the end of the year were in the financials, real estate, and health care, while the largest underweights were in consumer staples, communication services, and information technology. During the year, the Fund most notably increased its exposure to financials, and reduced exposure to information technology and utilities.

Topic 820, "Fair Value Measurement" establishes a single authoritative definition of fair value under U.S. GAAP, sets out a framework for measuring fair value and requires additional disclosures about fair value measurements. Various inputs are used in determining the value of a Fund's investments under FASB ASC Topic 820 guidance and are summarized into three broad categories. Level 1 includes valuations based on quoted prices of identical securities in active markets, including valuations for investments in mutual funds. Investments in the Underlying Funds and Master Funds are categorized as Level 1 within FASB ASC Topic 820 fair value hierarchy. The Level 1 valuation assets for the Funds can be referenced in the Schedules of Investments.

- (a) All or a portion of the security was on loan as of December 31, 2023.
- (b) All or a portion of the security was purchased on a delayed delivery basis. As of December 31, 2023, the total payable for investments purchased on a delayed delivery basis was $51,016.
- (c) The security is a direct debt of the agency and not collateralized by mortgages.
- (d) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.
- (e) Convertible security.
- (f) Security is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended. As of December 31, 2023, the value and the percentage of net assets of these securities was $1,828 and 0.2% of the Fund.
- (g) Security issued with a zero coupon. Income is recognized through the accretion of discount.
- (h) The interest rate for this security is inversely affected by upgrades or downgrades to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
- (i) Security is a step-up bond where the coupon may increase or step up at a future date or as the result of an upgrade or downgrade to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
- (j) Investment in affiliate.

(a) Non-income producing security.
(b) Security is restricted to resale to institutional investors or subject to trading restrictions due to sanctions on foreign issuers. See Restricted Securities table following the Schedules of Investments.
(c) All or a portion of the security is pledged or segregated as collateral.
(d) Security fair valued in good faith as a Level 2 security in accordance with the procedures approved by the Board of Trustees. Good faith fair valued securities are classified based on the applicable valuation inputs. See "Fair Value Measurement" in the Notes to Financial Statements.
(e) All or a portion of the security is subject to a written call option.
(f) Security fair valued in good faith as a Level 3 security in accordance with the procedures approved by the Board of Trustees. Good faith fair valued securities are classified based on the applicable valuation inputs. See "Fair Value Measurement" in the Notes to Financial Statements.
(g) Convertible security.
(h) Security issued with a zero coupon. Income is recognized through the accretion of discount.
(i) Security is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended. As of December 31, 2023, the value and the percentage of net assets of these securities was $43,473 and 4.4% of the Fund.
(j) Security is a step-up bond where the coupon may increase or step up at a future date or as the result of an upgrade or downgrade to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
(k) The interest rate for this security is inversely affected by upgrades or downgrades to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
(l) As of December 31, 2023, issuer was in bankruptcy and/or was in default relating to principal and/or interest. Partial or no payments were paid on the last interest or dividend date.
(m) Pay-in-kind security. Stated coupon is the pay-in-kind rate. The interest earned by the security may be paid in cash or additional par.
(n) Perpetual security. Next contractual call price and date are presented in parentheses, if applicable.
(o) All or a portion of the security was on loan as of December 31, 2023.
(p) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.
(q) This senior floating rate interest will settle after December 31, 2023. If a reference rate and spread is presented, it will go into effect upon settlement.
(r) Contingent distributions represent the right to receive additional distributions, if any, during the reorganization of the underlying company.
(s) Investment in affiliate.
(t) Yield changes daily to reflect current market conditions. Rate was the quoted yield as of December 31, 2023.

- (a) All or a portion of the security was on loan as of December 31, 2023.
- (b) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.
- (c) All or a portion of the security was purchased on a delayed delivery basis. As of December 31, 2023, the total payable for investments purchased on a delayed delivery basis was $70,612.
- (d) Security is restricted to resale to institutional investors or subject to trading restrictions due to sanctions on foreign issuers. See Restricted Securities table following the Schedules of Investments.
- (e) Security issued with a zero coupon. Income is recognized through the accretion of discount.
- (f) Security is a step-up bond where the coupon may increase or step up at a future date or as the result of an upgrade or downgrade to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
- (g) Security is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended. As of December 31, 2023, the value and the percentage of net assets of these securities was $234,769 and 7.8% of the Fund.
- (h) Pay-in-kind security. Stated coupon is the pay-in-kind rate. The interest earned by the security may be paid in cash or additional par.
- (i) Perpetual security. Next contractual call price and date are presented in parentheses, if applicable.
- (j) Non-income producing security.
- (k) As of December 31, 2023, issuer was in bankruptcy and/or was in default relating to principal and/or interest. Partial or no payments were paid on the last interest or dividend date.
- (l) Convertible security.
- (m) The interest rate for this security is inversely affected by upgrades or downgrades to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
- (n) This senior floating rate interest will settle after December 31, 2023. If a reference rate and spread is presented, it will go into effect upon settlement.
- (o) Security fair valued in good faith as a Level 3 security in accordance with the procedures approved by the Board of Trustees. Good faith fair valued securities are classified based on the applicable valuation inputs. See "Fair Value Measurement" in the Notes to Financial Statements.
- (p) Investment in affiliate.
- (q) Yield changes daily to reflect current market conditions. Rate was the quoted yield as of December 31, 2023.

(a) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.
(b) Security is a step-up bond where the coupon may increase or step up at a future date or as the result of an upgrade or downgrade to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
(c) Security is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended. As of December 31, 2023, the value and the percentage of net assets of these securities was $59,289 and 2.9% of the Fund.
(d) Security is restricted to resale to institutional investors or subject to trading restrictions due to sanctions on foreign issuers. See Restricted Securities table following the Schedules of Investments.
(e) Convertible security.
(f) Security issued with a zero coupon. Income is recognized through the accretion of discount.
(g) The interest rate for this security is inversely affected by upgrades or downgrades to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
(h) Security fair valued in good faith as a Level 3 security in accordance with the procedures approved by the Board of Trustees. Good faith fair valued securities are classified based on the applicable valuation inputs. See "Fair Value Measurement" in the Notes to Financial Statements.
(i) Pay-in-kind security. Stated coupon is the pay-in-kind rate. The interest earned by the security may be paid in cash or additional par.
(j) This senior floating rate interest will settle after December 31, 2023. If a reference rate and spread is presented, it will go into effect upon settlement.
(k) Non-income producing security.
(l) As of December 31, 2023, issuer was in bankruptcy and/or was in default relating Interest Only, Series 2016-XA-C33, REMIC, 1.56%, 03/17/59 (b)	10,321	268	(b) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.

Wells Fargo Alternative Loan 2007-PA3 Trust			(c) Security is a step-up bond where the coupon may increase or step up at a future date or as the result of an upgrade or downgrade to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.

Schedules of Investments (in thousands)
December 31, 2023

- (a) All or a portion of the security is pledged or segregated as collateral.
(b) All or a portion of the security was purchased on a delayed delivery basis. As of December 31, 2023, the total payable for investments purchased on a delayed delivery basis was $112,848.
(c) Security issued with a zero coupon. Income is recognized through the accretion of discount.
(d) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.
(e) Security is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended. As of December 31, 2023, the value and the percentage of net assets of these securities was $146,495 and 9.3% of the Fund.
(f) Non-income producing security.
(g) As of December 31, 2023, issuer was in bankruptcy and/or was in default relating to principal and/or interest. Partial or no payments were paid on the last interest or dividend date.
(h) Security is restricted to resale to institutional investors or subject to trading restrictions due to sanctions on foreign issuers. See Restricted Securities table following the Schedules of Investments.
(i) Security is a step-up bond where the coupon may increase or step up at a future date or as the result of an upgrade or downgrade to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
(j) All or a portion of the security was on loan as of December 31, 2023.
(k) Perpetual security. Next contractual call price and date are presented in parentheses, if applicable.
(l) Convertible security.
(m) Security fair valued in good faith as a Level 3 security in accordance with the procedures approved by the Board of Trustees. Good faith fair valued securities are classified based on the applicable valuation inputs. See "Fair Value Measurement" in the Notes to Financial Statements.
(n) Pay-in-kind security. Stated coupon is the pay-in-kind rate. The interest earned by the security may be paid in cash or additional par.
(o) The interest rate for this security is inversely affected by upgrades or downgrades to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
(p) This senior floating rate interest will settle after December 31, 2023. If a reference rate and spread is presented, it will go into effect upon settlement.
(q) Investment in affiliate.
(r) Yield changes daily to reflect current market conditions. Rate was the quoted yield as of December 31, 2023.

- (g) Security has a variable rate. Interest rates reset periodically. Rate stated was in effect as of December 31, 2023. For securities based on a published reference rate and spread, the reference rate and spread are presented. Certain variable rate securities do not indicate a reference rate and spread because they are determined by the issuer, remarketing agent, or offering documents and are based on current market conditions. The coupon rate for securities with certain features outlined in the offering documents may vary from the stated reference rate and spread. This includes, but is not limited to, securities with deferred rates, contingent distributions, caps, floors, and fixed-rate to float-rate features. In addition, variable rates for government and agency collateralized mortgage obligations ("CMO") and mortgage-backed securities ("MBS") are determined by tranches of underlying mortgage-backed security pools' cash flows into securities and pass-through rates which reflect the rate earned on the asset pool after management and guarantee fees are paid to the securitizing corporation. CMO and MBS variable rates are determined by a formula set forth in the security's offering documents.
- (h) The interest rate for this security is inversely affected by upgrades or downgrades to the credit rating of the issuer. Rate stated was the coupon as of December 31, 2023.
- (i) Security is restricted to resale to institutional investors or subject to trading restrictions due to sanctions on foreign issuers. See Restricted Securities table following the Schedules of Investments.
- (j) Investment in affiliate.
